ALL FRANCE UNITES IN PAYING HONOR TO AMERICAN DEAD

WALLACE SPEAKS FOR PEACE

PRESIDENT SENDS WREATH

PARIS, May 30.—America's war dead in Europe were eulogized and their graves in all parts of France were decorated today, the second Memorial Day since the close of the great struggle.

American flags floated in the breeze over the resting places of more than 70,000 soldiers, and allied organizations joined the Americans in France in services in their memory, while throughout the republic detachments of horizon-blue clad poilus acted as guards of honor at the cemeteries where lie those who fought beside them on the field of battle.

The American Legion, with the army and navy patriotic societies, co-operated with the newly formed Memorial Day Committee, headed by Ambassador Wallace, to decorate the little mounds in 497 burying places scattered along the battle front from the channel to Switzerland and from the Rhine to the Atlantic. There were 125 places where a single American soldier was buried and memorial services were conducted over each of these lone graves, some of which are in Southern Italy and others in Spain.

Allies Join to Pay Honors.

The French and representatives of others of the Allies took part in the ceremonies virtually everywhere, while Marshal Petain, the French Commander in Chief, and other men of prominence from the French Army and navy and civil life spoke at the cemeteries.

In some places the French women of the locality made the day almost one of their own, placing tokens of remembrance on the graves of the youths who fought beside their poilus in the dark days of two years ago. In all the Catholic churches in Paris, in the Jewish synagogues and in the American church there were religious observances of America's day of tribute to her dead, and in the provinces there were numberless local ceremonies organized by the parish priests or the population generally.

In Alsace a children's chorus marched from one burying ground to another to sing beside the graves of fallen Americans, while their mothers and sisters, with dead of their own to mourn, placed wild flowers of grass wreaths on the mounds beneath which lay the American dead.

For the American Army of Occupation, Major Gen. Henry T. Allen spoke at the great military cemetery in Romange-Sous-Montfaucon, where more than 21,000 Americas are buried and told of the great battle in which fell most of those to whom he did honor.

The following message from General Pershing was read at all the memorial ceremonies today:

"The thoughts of every living soldier of the American Expeditionary Forces will turn to France on this Memorial Day with reverence, love and honor for the comrades resting in the soil they gave their lives to free, that the children of the world and their children might enjoy peace, happiness and liberty."

Marshal Petain, standing on the slopes of Mt. Valerien, the last stronghold of the French during the siege of Paris in 1870, told 10,000 persons assembled in the little cemetery of Suresnes of the gratitude of France for the sacrifices made by the sons of America in the cause of France. Women in black predominated in the assemblage, but feminine attire of lighter hue brightened the scene, and the horizon blue of the soldiers of France was everywhere in evidence.

Ambassador Wallace Speaks at Suresnes

Long before the hour set for the services crowds began ascending the mount under a burning sun, although near by were signs of a threatening storm. Immediately upon the arrival of Marshal Petain, who took his place beside Hugh C. Wallace, the American Ambassador, with the Earl of Derby, the British Ambassador, on Mr. Wallace's left, the ceremony began, Ambassador Wallace delivering the first address.

"So long as the peace of the world is challenged by the hideous head of anarchy, which must be crushed without consideration or counting the cost," the Ambassador began, "the work the hero dead began is incomplete. The war was fought to establish lasting peace for mankind. We must preserve the peace the heroes won."

"Today," he continued, after describing Memorial Day as observed in the United States, "we extend this pious pilgrimage to France, for here also sleep our soldier dead. They came 2,000,000 strong, to strike for civilization with their gallant comrades of France and England. They fought and conquered, but thousands fell, and they lie before us in this sacred earth.

GERMANY IS TENSE AS ELECTION NEARS

HELFFERICH STIRS CROWDS

Calls for Deutschland Ueber Alles—Mueller Would Show Germans Through with War.

BERLIN, May 30.—All Germany is in a state of nervous apprehension. Within seven days of the general election, the air is full of rumors of an impending coup, or, rather, a series of opposing coups. Nationalists and Communists accuse each other of plotting, and every day brings its "revelations."

To a certain extent these are only a matter of political tactics, but at the same time it is impossible to ignore the accumulating evidence that the situation is full of serious possibilities. So uneasy is public feeling that the Government has felt itself compelled to issue a long statement in which are reviewed all the reports in circulation, and to draw certain conclusions. These, however, are of such a vague character that they failed entirely to restore public confidence.

"It is impossible to deny," says this communiqué, "that danger exists both from the Right and from the Left. Both dangers are serious, but they are not acute, and they can be overcome if faced boldly."

One factor of the situation is whether the Government has power to enforce its will. The possibilities of a militarist coup are based on the existence of the so-called free corps of temporary volunteers, the Baltic troops and other formations which, though nominally demobilized, are wholly or partially still in being, either under new names in recognized forces or as armed individuals linked together by various secret organizations. The elements are present and willing if it is believed that the moment has arrived to attempt to seize power by force of arms, and the crux of the situation is that not even the Government itself knows how far the regular forces can be relied upon to oppose any such coup.

It is doubtful whether it is really able to do more than await events.

Helfferich Calls for Germanic Revival.

An election meeting in Berlin addressed by Herr Helfferich, Finance Minister under the old régime, was the occasion of the most violent Nationalist and anti-republican demonstration that Germany has known since the recent revolution. Not only was the building where the meeting was held packed, but enormous crowds assembled in the streets to cheer Helfferich.

Some gems from the Nationalist leader's speech were:

"What we have most at heart is the revival of Germanic ideas. We must see the incorporation of these ideas in the old black and white flag. We swear to hoist those colors again. Go to the polling booths under the motto 'Deutschland ueber Alles in der Welt.'"

Helfferich's great audience joined in singing the old anthem, following with cheers for the Hohenzollerns and cries of "Down with the German Republic!"

Meantime the crowds outside sought diversion in attacks on passing Jews, including some women who had finally to be rescued by military police. The anti-Semitic demonstration continued in neighboring streets until a late hour.

Of more political importance than these signs of a revived spirit of Prussianism was the fact that Helfferich in the course of his speech hinted at a possible union between the Nationalist and so-called German People's Party. He suggested as a motto, "March apart, but strike together."

So that the one possible result of the elections would seem to be a return to power of the "two strong Nationalist parties."

Lays Bare Plan to Evade Treaty.

Dr. Reinhold, Saxon Minister of Finance, speaking at Dresden, made the following frank statement on the world position:

"The League of Nations, of which I hope Germany is going to become a member with equal rights, must be a league for the rebuilding of the world. In that connection it is impossible for us ever to come to terms with the peace of Versailles. For us Versailles exists only as a chain which we must break."

In the course of his speech Reinhold also gave away completely the foundations on which the hopes are built by those who believe the Versailles peace can be regarded as "a scrap of paper." A certain change, he said, has taken place in the attitude of the Entente toward Germany. "France's object," he declared, "is no longer the object of England and Italy. France no longer has a free hand. Because England

IRISH SITUATION GROWING CRITICAL; CABINET CALLED

WARSHIPS GETTING READY

Report Says They Will Be Sent to Irish Ports—London Expects Stirring Events.

CHRONICLE URGES "WAR"

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Monday, May 31.—An important Cabinet meeting is to be held today to consider the situation in Ireland. Premier Lloyd George will preside, and Lord French, the Lord Lieutenant; Sir Hamar Greenwood, the Secretary for Ireland, and Sir Nevil Macready, the Commander in Chief there, will be present.

Among other things the Cabinet will have to make arrangements for the transportation of munitions and military stores by troops, since the Irish dockers and railway men have refused to handle them.

The question of how more troops are to be dispatched to Ireland also has arisen. It is calculated that there are now about 50,000 troops in Ireland, and several more battalions are under orders, but Irish railway workers refuse to handle trains carrying troops or munitions.

The Daily Chronicle's political correspondent hears it is not at all likely that the triple alliance (British labor unions) will support the action of Irish union workers in refusing to move trains laden with munitions or soldiers.

Urges Offensive by Troops.

In an editorial on the "Irish Menace," after referring to the Cabinet meeting called for today, The Daily Chronicle says:

"Since new blood was introduced into the personnel of the Government at Dublin we have been looking forward to some drastic changes of policy and method. So far these have not yet been in evidence, and the Sinn Feiners have continued their rebellious career unchecked. * * * It is high time that the Sinn Fein conspirators should be treated frankly in every country where a Government intends to govern.

"We say 'rebels,' although the Sinn Fein murderers have incurred all the liabilities of men in open rebellion without any of their title to respect. The murderers are none the less rebels because they prefer the dark and shoot only when they are numerically superior. They have been allowed to proclaim an 'Irish Republic,' to invest themselves with power to dispense what they call justice and punishment, to terrorize the countryside and make themselves feared as the Government is not feared.

"It may be a despicable kind of war, but they themselves call it war, and it is only by using the mobile military forces which we possess, by carrying on an offensive with unresisting energy against them, catching them red-handed in their acts of murder, arson and pillage—it is only by such methods that we can relieve the loyal or intimidated population from victimization or fearful allegiance. It is only by such methods that armed resistance against the State should be met.

"If there has been no outburst of indignation in this country at the wanton acts of the Sinn Feiners and their violent attacks upon our representatives, that, we fear, is because the nation has become jaded to sensations and is little moved by tales of violence.

"A big responsibility rests upon the movers of public opinion in this country."

The gloomiest prognostications are being heard here in regard to future developments in Ireland. The Government is proceeding with the "Government of Ireland bill" (Home Rule), which offers no solution of the problem, according to most observers, and as a high authority said to THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday: "Anything may happen."

Gloomy Feeling in London.

Rumors of action by the Vatican in the Irish situation which, according to a dispatch to THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday, are taken seriously in Belfast, are probably connected with the report which has been current here for some time past to the effect that Cardinal Logue had been endeavoring to induce the Pope to issue a message condemning violent methods.

The story is that at a meeting of Irish bishops held in Maynooth College three or four weeks ago, Cardinal Logue brought up the question of the attitude of the Catholic Church in Ireland toward the republican movement. The Cardinal wanted the episcopacy to unite in issuing a pastoral letter to their clergy denouncing the criminal outrages by which the extremists are terrorizing Ireland, and at the same time, as Cardinal Primate of Ireland, he argued that such a situation was damaging the cause of Irish nationalism.

The Cardinal, according to the story, was outvoted and he then determined to take the case to Rome.

Senators Are Expected to Bury the Bonus Bill; It Goes to Committee Today, May Be Forgotten

WASHINGTON, May 30.—The Soldier Bonus bill, passed yesterday by the House by 289 votes to 92, will be received tomorrow by the Senate. The measure will follow the regular course and be referred to a committee.

Inasmuch as a recess, and possibly adjournment, will be taken by Congress on Saturday until after the political conventions, the Bonus bill seems doomed to a long sleep in the Senate committee. If a recess is taken, leaders do not contemplate reconvening until about Sept. 1. Some Senators are quite frank in saying that the bill will never get any further, and that tomorrow's reference to a committee will in fact be an "interment."

Opposition to soldier relief has been more pronounced in the Senate than in the House, where yesterday's vote showed only 40 Republicans and 52 Democrats recorded against the measure.

WARN OF CONSTANT DANGER

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 29.—Once more the fate of Fiume comes to plague weary Europe. Following the seizure of several Jugoslav villages outside of Fiume by D'Annunzio and his troops and his declaration that he would occupy Sussak, adjoining Fiume, the Belgrade Government has notified the Allied Governments that it will resist with armed force any further efforts of the poet-adventurer, and has called upon the Allies to put an end to the escapade of D'Annunzio, on the ground that it constitutes danger of war.

At the headquarters in Paris of the Jugoslavs it was said this afternoon that if D'Annunzio takes control of Sussak, which is actually occupied by Italian regular troops, Jugoslav troops will chase him into the sea.

"We have had enough of this man and his doings," said a Jugoslav spokesman. "If the Italian Government does not calm him and disavow him it may be taken for certain that we will act. Our patience is at an end. It is true that M. Vestnitch, our new Premier, is deliberate, but he cannot resist the pressure of popular opinion."

Trumbitch Demands Opening of Port.

M. Trumbitch, Foreign Secretary of Jugoslavia and head of the Jugoslav Peace Delegation, declares that whether or not d'Annunzio precipitates the armed clash which Belgrade says will come if the poet tries to invade Jugoslav territory, the time has come to get him out of Fiume, because Central Europe and especially his own country can no longer afford to have their main sea outlet closed to them. Whether Italy or Jugoslavia eventually owns Fiume, M. Trumbitch says, the port must be opened to use at once.

"We have very good reasons to fear that the incidents at Sussak are only the beginning of the trouble," he said. "It is certain that d'Annunzio is nursing a project to extend his occupation not only into the zone held by regular Italian troops but also into territory held by our troops. However, at no price will we permit this to come about. We have decided to prevent it by energetic military measures.

"Far be it from us to try to solve the Fiume problem by force of arms. It is to the Allies and to the Allies alone that rightly belongs the task of ending this intolerable situation, which is without a precedent in history. But the incidents which have just taken place at Sussak and Shalai show how the presence of d'Annunzio at Fiume is dangerous to European peace.

"It is more than a question of national rivalry between Italy and Jugoslavia. When so much depends upon the economic recovery of that part of Europe which depends upon the use of this port, d'Annunzio has for eight months bottled up not only Jugoslavia but Hungary and partially Czecho-Slovakia.

"As for us we not only cannot export to the allied countries our wood, our cereals and our cattle, but we cannot even feed Dalmatia, which has always received its cereals from Jugoslavia by way of Fiume. In the name of the economic interests of Europe we would demand of the Allies that they lift this blockade, from which we have suffered too long."

In French official circles the action of D'Annunzio in further exciting the Jugoslavs is regarded as serious business. No news was received today of any development of the poet's declaration that he would seize Sussak, but it is admitted that there is no knowing just what wild enterprise he and his arditi will undertake.

D'Annunzio Threatens Nitti.

According to Matin, D'Annunzio on the night of May 26 led his men in an attack on the Jugoslavs and drove them from several nearby points, notably the village of Caviai. Preceding this, a procession of 10,000 people paraded the streets of Fiume in protest against the arrest in Rome of certain Dalmatians and Fiumians. D'Annunzio addressed the crowd from a balcony of his palace and after a fiery speech, in which he said he would like to go to Rome and put Nitti's face in need of massage treatment, he hurled his hat and his handkerchief out to the enthusiastic crowd.

The crowd then went to the barri-

BURST PIPE GEYSER ROARS IN FIFTH AV.

STREET RISES UNDER AUTO

Gov. Smith Views Scene with Crowds—Elevators Stopped in Many Buildings.

Joseph P. Ward, a lawyer, was with his wife on the balcony of the Hotel Savoy, Fifty-ninth Street and Fifth Avenue, at 3:20 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Ward had just seen a friend atop a bus, and Mr. Ward was leaning over the rail trying to see the friend.

Suddenly he noticed a young man, accompanied by a young woman, who was driving a touring car south in the avenue, make frantic movements with his hands and stop near the southwest corner of Fifty-eighth Street.

"I was surprised," Mr. Ward said later to a reporter for THE NEW YORK TIMES, "to see that the asphalt under the auto was rising—bulging you might call it. And little jets of steam were spouting from new made cracks in the pavement. Quickly the steam came faster. Then it came with a burst.

"The young man made more frantic movements with his arms, and you never saw a touring car back fifty feet faster in your life. And no sooner had it backed the fifty feet than a section of the pavement about four feet square went shooting into the air in pieces. The chunks rose to a height of maybe twenty or thirty feet and fell as far as half a block away.

Column of Steam Rises.

"After an instant of rumbling a column of steam and dust about three or four feet in diameter shot into the air, rising as high at least as the top of that building there (indicating a seven-story apartment building on the northeast corner of Fifty-eighth Street and Fifth Avenue.)

"I never heard such a roaring in my life until thirty minutes later, when that particular roar reached its height. The dust was so thick that I could see nothing after a minute or two. The roar was so great that we could not talk to each other. I had to go back into the hotel after about five or six minutes. By that time all the buildings were coated with white dust. And the wind, which was blowing to the northwest, was painting the trees in the Plaza around the fountain and the trees in Central Park with white. It was awe-inspiring."

This strange accident that was seen from its inception by Mr. Ward and his wife was caused, it was learned later, by the bursting of a fifteen-inch main of the New York Steam Company, buried about eight or nine feet under the asphalt of the avenue.

Late last night an emergency crew working at the spot had not reached the main, and it was said by the man in charge that the cause for the spectacular blowout was not known. Probably, however, it was said, the earth around the main had been worn away by water and the unsupported pipe, carrying a volume of steam at an average pressure of sixty pounds, had given way.

This steam pipe carried the motive power for elevators or many of the apartment houses of the neighborhood. The elevators in these houses appeared last night to be scheduled for a shutdown to last, at least, until well into today.

Elevator Service Crippled.

According to the New York Steam Company the explosion forced them to discontinue their service in Fifty-eighth Street from Seventh to Fifth Avenue and in Fifty-seventh Street from Fifth to Sixth Avenue. This left the Catholic Club, a number of big loft buildings and several small apartment houses without power, needed principally to operate their elevators. Emergency gangs still were digging at the point of the break early this morning, but the work had not progressed far enough to enable the company to determine how long it would take to repair the damage. It was said definitely however that the job could not be done in time to supply steam this morning, and that it might take a couple of days.

Traffic in the avenue was held up for more than an hour. At 6:45 the artificial geyser-volcano still was erupting with vigor, but showing none of its early violence.

An eyewitness with whom a reporter talked agreed with policemen on duty there that it was remarkable that no one had suffered injury. They all said in practically the same words:

"It surely was a miracle that no one was killed or injured."

Reserves from the East Fifty-first Street Police Station arrived at the scene within a few moments of the beginning of the blow-up. It didn't need their warnings, however, to keep people at a respectable distance from the roaring column.

HIGH PRICE CAUSES ARE STILL IN FORCE, SAYS RESERVE BOARD

LABOR AND MATERIAL SHORT

Underproduction Still Retards Any Movement for General Decrease in Prices.

CROP OUTLOOK IS GOOD

Chairman of Boston Reserve Bank Thinks Present Price Cuts Will Be Permanent.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—Little actual relief from high prices is seen by the Federal Reserve Board in presenting its analysis of May business. Although the pressure of disturbing factors is seen, the board fails to find any real change in underlying conditions of trade.

"The changes that have taken place," says the board, "may, however, afford a basis for changes in business relationships that may broaden into more far-reaching alteration of the essential price structure.

"The continuance of labor difficulties and unrest, particularly in connection with the railroads, when added to the difficult situation produced by car shortage and lack of equipment, has caused considerable interruption to business operations, and the whole outlook has been such as to bring about a severe curtailment in the volume of stock and securities transactions and to compel very material lessening in the market value of Liberty bonds and of other securities of the first grade.

"In addition to intense shortage of labor on farms and at other points of primary production, sporadic strikes in many lines of manufacturing, notably textiles, have continued to indicate unrest. Wages have apparently fallen behind the advance in prices and cost of living. The movement of labor from the farms to the cities is continuing.

"Various demands for higher wages have been taken under advisement for the purpose of bringing about compromise adjustments between employers and employes. General complaint of low efficiency or small output per unit of labor continues to be prevalent. The difficulty of getting skilled labor in some of the more highly developed lines of manufacture is very considerable.

"The financial occurrences of the month have been of first importance.

"In addition to a heavy decline both in volume and value of securities in the financial centres, there has been a general tendency to revision of interest rates. This has applied both to call and time funds and to rates for commercial paper. No material change in rediscount rates at Federal Reserve Banks has occurred, but an effort to limit credit to essential necessities has been general. It has been sought to promote this control of credit through conferences among bankers and discussions of the financial situation at meetings of bankers and financial authorities generally.

"On May 18, an important conference between the Federal Reserve Board and the Federal Advisory Council and Class A Directors of Reserve banks occurred in Washington, as the outcome of which agreement was reached to make a more careful scrutiny of applications for bank credit, with a view to granting those only which may be found to be necessary.

"It was further agreed that caution must be exercised and commitments must be made only with discretion.

"In District No. 1 (Boston) there is noted a trend toward greater discrimination and economy in buying, with pressure for lower prices, but there is also noted very great difficulty in the way of actual deflation.

Retail Prices Lower Here.

"In District No. 2 (New York) price reductions are noted in retail stores, a considerable accumulation of goods awaiting shipment resulting from strikes, a growth in the cost of doing business, great reduction in securities prices, but nevertheless a continued high demand for goods and activity in trade.

"In District No. 3 (Philadelphia) the congestion of freight and accompanying conditions have combined with a quieter state of things in the markets and a larger relative public demand for medium and lower-priced goods, to alter in some respects the general drift of development of preceding months.

"The arrival of the time for active effort in connection with crops has introduced a new factor into the situation in those districts where agriculture is the chief industry. In the cotton region the movement of the 1919 crop has continued to slow up, while farming conditions in the Southwest (District No. 11, Dallas) have not been very favorable.

"Actual damage to crops thus far through unfavorable weather has been small. With respect to wheat it is reported by District No. 9 (Minneapolis) that Spring wheat acreage will be 12 per cent less than a year ago owing to shortage of farm labor, but that there will be increased seeding to flax, barley and oats. Corn acreage is expected to be unusually large. Live stock conditions are improving, but the herds are in poorer condition than at this time a year ago. In District No. 10 (Kansas City) winter wheat made good progress in April.

"In the Middle West (District No. 7,

Canadian Town Half Destroyed By Forest Fire, 1,000 Homeless

ST. JOHN, N. B., May 30.—One-half of the residents of St. Quentin, N. B., having a population of approximately 2,000, are homeless tonight as the result of a forest fire which swept through the village on Saturday.

The property damage is estimated at $750,000 to $1,000,000.

Sixty-five dwellings, three mills, two hotels, the Canadian National Railway station, the Provincial Bank and many business places were destroyed.

HALIFAX, N. S., May 30.—Fire swept the main street of the village of Londonderry today, destroying four churches, a school, more than a dozen dwellings and a public hall at a loss of $200,000. There was no loss of life.

FUND REVELATIONS BLOW TO PRIMARIES

DIVIDED AS TO REMEDIES

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—Opinion as to the ultimate effect on the country of the disclosures of expenditures in the Presidential primary campaigns has not crystallized sufficiently in Washington to justify any prediction concerning the course the political leaders will take in dealing with the question. So far there are only surface indications of the sentiment prevailing among Senators and Representatives over the disclosures in the investigation by the Senate committee engaged in the effort to ascertain how and why so much money was spent in the interest of the various aspirants for nomination as President.

It seems to be clear, however, that the information obtained has caused a marked impression that promises some sort of action in the near future. One thing that stands out is the evidence of the conviction of a large number of members of Congress that the Presidential preferential primary system has not produced the results its advocates had predicted or expected. There is talk already that the system should be radically reformed. Just how this reform should be accomplished is not put in concrete form by any of those whose interest in the subject has been aroused, but the comments heard here suggest that agitation is certain and that results may be expected.

No Presidential preference primary law is on the Federal statute books, and so far suggestions that the national Congress should take a hand in an attempt to adjust present unsatisfactory conditions have not caused much discussion. General Wood has put forward the idea that all Presidential preference primaries should be held on the same day, but this has not aroused any particular interest here, probably for the reason that it is only within the last day or two that Representatives have given any definite thought to the question of Presidential primaries.

One suggestion advanced in an off-hand way is that the States should adopt a uniform primary law. Senator Borah has proposed that expenditures in Presidential primaries should be limited to $10,000 by a candidate in one State. It is too early, however, to say what is likely to be the sentiment of Congress as to remedies.

Agree Remedies Are Necessary.

That remedies are necessary appears to be in the minds of Senators and Representatives. Many of them are convinced that the present system, or multiplicity of systems, is a failure if for no other reason than it compels men of the highest standing and ability to seek large sums to advance their candidacies or to go heavily into their own private purses to the same end. There is a feeling also that a man fitted by education, experience and character to be President of the United States should not be forced to resort to the undignified procedure of attempting to influence the electorate to indorse his ambition to live in the White House.

From surface indications, at least, few politicians in Washington are willing to advocate what is commonly described as the old system of a hand-picked national political convention. But deep in their hearts many of these self-same politicians, including a considerable percentage of those committed to the primary method, are in favor of a change that will bring less internal party strife and enable the convention to exercise a free choice based on the conditions that confront the delegates when they have had an opportunity to exchange views. The prominence of opinion that a dark horse may be nominated at Chicago or San Francisco is indicative of this condition of the professional political mind.

With due regard to the statement that opinion as to the effect of the disclosures as to primary campaign expenditures has not crystallized in Washington, it is apparent that the reaction from the disclosures has been critical of the methods employed by managers of the candidacies of Presidential aspirants. A very general feeling appears to exist that the people will not like the manner in which large sums have been raised and expended in this connection. Not that there is any marked sentiment that money was expended im-

LIVELY FLIGHT OF TRIAL BALLOONS FOR GOV. LOWDEN

LOWDEN BOOMERS ACTIVE

KING COMES FOR PENROSE

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 30.—Every train reaching Chicago today brought its quota of Republican National Committeemen and political leaders, and by night the hotel lobbies were alive with the convention spirit.

As the clans begin to gather it becomes more evident that the more prominent leaders of the party feel that they have the situation well in hand, and that any program which the majority of them agree upon can be carried out successfully. It is the distinct feeling that neither General Wood nor any other candidate has at present enough delegates he can control to dominate the situation or assure his nomination in opposition to the leaders.

To General Wood is allowed a maximum of about 300 votes on the first ballot. His opponents say that he will not get many more at any stage of the fight. This may be true if it develops that an agreement of powerful leaders has been made to steer the nomination in the direction of either Lowden or Knox. It would appear that General Wood cannot hope to get the nomination on the basis of the delegates who have been elected under instructions to vote for him on the first ballot, and that to win he must have the support of Senator Penrose or some other powerful influence.

The grip of the leaders on the situation is strengthened by the fact that there has not as yet developed a wave of enthusiasm for any of the candidates which would give promise of carrying him over the goal line. The uninstructed and unpledged delegates are so split up that it would appear that they can be manipulated if an agreement is reached.

Working Hard for Lowden.

The Lowden supporters are doing their utmost to concentrate thought on their candidate and spread about among the leaders and delegates who are coming here the propaganda that Lowden will be the choice of the convention. The Wood forces, are somewhat handicapped in their efforts by the fact that Colonel Procter and some of the other leading workers are what are termed here amateurs in the big political game. Their chief political strategist where the inner workings of the convention are concerned is Frank H. Hitchcock, who seems to be doing little or nothing at this time, simply waiting to see what is going to happen.

It was a day favorable to Lowden so far as the lively propaganda conducted in his behalf could make it so. Reports were being spread about that this and that leader was for Lowden and that his nomination seemed to be the best bet. Most of the leaders mentioned, when questioned, simply smiled and had no comment to make. And under such conditions the propaganda made headway.

Hert to Command Lowden Forces.

It is the general belief here that Colonel William Cooper Procter will have full charge of the Wood fight from this time and that Frank H. Hitchcock already is practically out of it. This line-up may be changed, but such, at least, is the report tonight.

It also is reported that National Committeeman A. T. Hert of Kentucky will be Generalissimo of the Lowden forces in the final effort to put Lowden over. Hert is well versed in the strategy of convention politics, and his advice and direction should prove a big factor in the Governor's favor, according to the viewpoint here. Hert is at work already, busy every moment of the day reaching out for further support for Governor Lowden. His headquarters at the Congress is as busy a spot as the Lowden national headquarters.

There is much speculation and discussion of the chance of Senator Penrose getting to the convention with sufficient reserve strength to play a dominating part in the deliberations. If it is true that Senator Penrose intends to make a finish fight for Knox, his appearance here is all important to the Senator's cause. There has not been a strong movement looking to the nomination of Senator Knox, among political leaders here up to this time. In fact reports that he might be the so-called "dark horse" have been rather deprecated, and it is doubtful if the Knox boom can hope to reach proportions that will give promise of putting him over, unless Senator Penrose or some other big figure is on the ground to vitalize the fight.

King Comes for Penrose.

John T. King of Connecticut, one-time director of the Wood forces, who was put out by Colonel Procter, is here holding the proxy for Penrose on the National Committee. This is accepted as a pretty good proof that Penrose will not get to Chicago under any circumstances for several days. King will represent the Penrose interests here in the meantime, and in the event that Penrose is unable to come on to Chicago will, it is felt, appear as the Penrose official spokesman.

Just how the Penrose-King alliance

fill afoot whatever chance General Wood may have had of getting any considerable number of the Pennsylvania delegates is a topic of interest tonight. It is accepted as certain that King has no use whatever for the present régime in charge of the Wood campaign, and that he will not turn a finger to help nominate the General.

King was a very busy man today, getting the ear of most of the leaders who are here. Great importance was not attached to this activity until it became known that King was the Penrose spokesman. Then the tongues began to wag.

If Knox Can't Be "Put Over."

King had nothing to say about what he was doing or whose nomination he was advocating. Penrose is said to be straight out for Senator Knox, but ready to listen to the Lowden proposition in the event that Knox cannot be put over and the Lowden forces can show that their man has enough strength to win with the aid of Pennsylvania's delegation.

It also developed tonight that National Committeeman-elect Jake Hamon of Oklahoma holds the proxy of National Committeeman Babler of Missouri. Hamon has been quoted as favoring the nomination of Lowden, and doesn't deny that such is his frame of mind.

Hert of Kentucky, Hamon, Kealing and other leaders who are here on the ground are classed as among the Lowden camp. Hert is openly in favor of Lowden's nomination. Some see in the situation which has been created a movement to give Lowden a tryout by some of the leaders to see how the Lowden talk takes with delegates and with the newspapers of the country.

At any rate, a little group of the leaders are permitting Lowden to be put forward with a vengeance and have their ears to the ground to get the reaction. How it will work out is much discussed in political circles in Chicago tonight.

The opinion still holds here that Senator Penrose is too sick to come to Chicago and take an active part in the convention doings. Several of the leaders don't expect to see Penrose here at all. But none seem to have definite knowledge of Penrose's actual condition.

Johnson Out of It.

Senator Johnson apparently has lost any chance he had of success as a result of what has occurred before the Senate sub-committee investigating primary campaign expenditures. The party leaders have come to realize that the party has been badly scarred by the row which was started by the Borah-Johnson clique in the Senate, and if the gossip is to be accepted as an indication of what may happen, Johnson will be shut off at any cost.

"Come out of there," yelled the policeman. "What do you mean by violating a city ordinance. I am going to take you to the Police Station and lock you up on a charge of disorderly conduct."

"Oh, go to the devil," the man retorted. "I am committing suicide."

And that, the leader said, was a story which might be applied to the activities of Senator Johnson.

Hays to Keep Hands Off.

Chairman Will Hays of the National Committee, who got into town today, announced that he was going to keep his hands off, that he would not support any candidate and that it was his duty to elect rather than select a candidate. Stories have been published that Hays was in agreement with National Committeeman Hert of Kentucky as to the advisability of nominating Governor Lowden. These reports Hays denies. He takes the stand that he is not for Lowden, Wood, Harding, Knox, or any other candidate and that it is the duty of the convention to name the best man and his duty to elect that man after the convention makes its decision.

Apparently Hays has been able to keep in this neutral position although, according to gossip, there has been great pressure brought to bear on him from more than one direction. Today he made a flying tour of all the headquarters and talked genially with everyone. He asked the correspondents to name one of their number to act as his neutral guide, as he did not know where all the headquarters were located.

Open Sessions for Contests.

For the first time the Republican National Committee will hold open sessions tomorrow to hear contests over seats in the convention. There are to be no steam roller methods employed this time. Newspaper correspondents and representatives of the candidates will be admitted to the hearings, and all the evidence will be given to the public.

This announcement was made today by Chairman Hays, who said that there was to be no question as to the fact that decisions were made on the merits of the case involved. There was nothing to do away with all reason for bitterness among leaders over what is due.

With the filing of late contests there are 137 seats involved. It is the belief here that the decisions made will not vitally affect the chances of any candidate. It is stated that no candidate can hope to get enough delegates, no matter how the contests go, to obtain a majority on the first ballot.

Practically all the contests are in Southern States which regularly fall into the Democratic column in national into the Democratic column in National Committee to get the contests out of the way within four days. Delay is not to be permitted if it can possibly be avoided.

There is a strong desire among some members of the National Committee to establish a new order of things, so far as the selection of candidates from the South is concerned. This will probably not be brought about during the present convention, but some predict that the decision to hold open hearings marks the beginning of the end, and that between this election and the next a rearrangement will be made.

Supporters of General Wood expressed satisfaction tonight over the decision to have open meetings. Wood is a contender in most of the contests and hopes to add materially to his strength as a result of the decisions.

Chairman Predicts Success.

"It looks here today like the middle of convention week. The interest, the crowds of enthusiastic Republicans already arrived, indicate the nation-wide party vigor and enthusiasm.

"Everywhere Republicans are 'rearing to go.' The unprecedented confidence in Republican success which obtains everywhere is simply the reflection of the realization of the necessity for such success as a matter of national welfare. Everywhere is the appreciation of the fact that we have a task to perform worthy of our party strength and party history, that we have a patriotic work to do that is epoch-making and that upon our performance will largely depend the future of the country.

"The chronicler of centuries to come will look backward at these now approaching years as of the most tremendous import in the development of American policy, and it is the Republican Party that is to direct that development. Nothing shall lessen the certainty of this Republican success, nothing shall decrease the certainty of our doing well what we are certainly about to be called upon to accomplish. We have a work to do for the good of the country and it takes us all to do it."

Johnson headquarters asserted today that in twelve States in which Johnson entered the primaries he obtained a total of 830,885 votes, as compared with 613,625 for his nearest rival. The list did not include Illinois.

Predict Lowden Loss in Missouri

Special to The New York Times.

KANSAS CITY, May 30.—Disclosures before the Campaign Fund Investigating Committee has lost Governor Lowden most of his support from the Missouri delegates according to the belief of Republican leaders in this part of the State. The Johnson men believe they will gain.

ALLEN BOOMERS SPURRED.

Special to The New York Times.

TOPEKA, May 30.—Governor Allen's chances in the Republican National Convention are being discussed more earnestly in Kansas since his debate with Samuel Gompers. The Allen boosters say that whatever chance he has of landing a place on the national ticket comes from his industrial court stand, though it is admitted that he would face antagonism also on that ground.

CHANCE FOR DAVIS SEEN IN DEADLOCK

NEW FORCES DEVELOPING

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—That a deadlock is pretty certain to come in the Democratic National Convention, due to the operation of the two-thirds rule, the bitterness engendered during the primaries and the division over platform planks and party leadership, is now generally admitted by the managers of the prospective candidates.

Less than half of the 1,092 delegates to the Democratic convention are pledged, although it is believed that nearly two-thirds of the number are committed. This situation is encouraging those leaders in the party who cling steadfastly to old-time principles to believe that the opportunity will appear at San Francisco to upset the calculations of the practical politicians and the well-mapped plan in behalf of McAdoo and his labor following to force him on the convention.

It is admitted by some leaders that the Democrats entered the campaign two months ago without much encouragement. This listlessness among the leaders and the voters permitted the primaries to go on without any great contest. The belief by many Democrats that the chances of success in the November elections were remote kept in the background many aspirants who were considered to stand for solid Democratic principles.

See Better Chance for Davis.

Not until nearly all the primaries had been held did the conservatives suddenly seem to feel that there was an excellent chance of winning. Then it was that a large body of Democrats began to discuss the possibility of the nomination going to a man who, according to their view, did not represent real Democratic principles.

As the conditions grew brighter for Democratic success with the exposure of great campaign funds for the Republican candidates, and the failure of the Republican leaders in Congress, some leaders closely allied with the Administration began to look over the field. It is said that they came to a decision that the trend was away from solid principles toward radicalism, with McAdoo fostering this sentiment in the hope of capturing the nomination. While this feeling against radicalism is widespread, it has not brought together any organized force and no leader appeared to direct it.

In Congress and out of it in the last ten days talk, in a political way, has been of rosy prospects of Democratic success, and of the necessity to find a candidate to offer the convention who will satisfy a majority of the party and meet with the approval of the President. The suggestion of Ambassador Davis has convinced this group of his availability.

While there has been much hesitation about open expression of these views, because most men have committed themselves in a definite or half-binding way to avowed aspirants, the talk has indicated that all that may be necessary to bring about the nomination of Mr. Davis is the development of a deadlock and the direction of his campaign by a few resourceful leaders. The conditions, some Democrats say, will be more favorable for launching the cause of Mr. Davis in the convention than was the movement for Woodrow Wilson at Baltimore in 1912.

Opposition is said to exist to ex-Secretary McAdoo because of what are termed his radical tendencies, and because of the easy charge to make of nepotism in politics, the continuance of the Wilson "dynasty." Attorney General Palmer, one of the leading candidates, it is declared, has obtained the disapproval of labor and is also weak because of his residence in the Republican State of Pennsylvania.

There is as much bitterness existing between Palmer and McAdoo as between Johnson and Wood in the Republican ranks. In the event that Mr. Palmer cannot get it said, his delegates would be turned against McAdoo and would go to some compromise candidate.

Might Swing Palmer Delegates.

Mr. Palmer is easily the strongest candidate at the start, as he has more delegates who will vote for him on the first ballot than any of the other serious contenders. Behind his candidacy are also a great number of practical politicians and national committeemen. They want party success and are said to be willing to turn their influence to a compromise candidate such as Ambassador Davis.

In the opinion of several national committeemen, Mr. Davis has been brought into the field at an opportune time, and if his early advocacy is backed by earnest work it is predicted that he has very good chances of figuring as a compromise nominee in the event that McAdoo does not sweep the convention. It is said that only in the event of a deadlock and the eclipse of McAdoo and Palmer will President Wilson exert his influence as affecting the nomination. The President is so friendly to Ambassador Davis and regards him so highly that it is believed by some that he would attempt to sway the convention to Mr. Davis after his son-in-law and Attorney General Palmer had disappeared as possibilities.

President Wilson's prestige will be seen in the convention largely in the formation of the platform. His ideas as to the League of Nations and other vital planks, it is believed, will prevail. The nominee, it is predicted, will run on a platform supporting the President's views on the League of Nations despite the fight which William J. Bryan will make to modify the plank dealing with the treaty.

DAVIS LONG A 'BIG MAN,' GOV. CORNWELL SAYS

"Knew Years Ago That He had a Great Future"—Labor Leader Trusts His Fairness.

Special to The New York Times.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., May 30.—There is no more enthusiastic supporter of John W. Davis as the Democratic Presidential nominee in all West Virginia than Governor John J. Cornwell. The Governor, who spoke here tonight, said this afternoon that Mr. Davis would be equal to the Presidential office in every way.

"He always was a big man, but he was localized here in West Virginia," said the Governor. "He was a big man before he ever went to Congress. I knew years ago that he had a great future before him, and I would have been deeply surprised if he had not achieved it.

"When I went to the State Senate in 1899, he was nothing more than a boy of 25 or 26, but even then his great ability and promise were recognized. As young as he was, he was the leader of the Democrats in the House.

"There was a bitter and complicated situation in the Legislature. The House was Democratic and the Senate was Republican. A joint ballot was to be taken upon the election of McGraw to the United States Senate. The Legislature was tied. Republicans began to contest seats and Democrats started counter contests in retaliation.

"John Davis led that fight, and when he made his first great speech all of the older men from the Senate went over to the House to hear him. He put forward one of the most splendid arguments I have ever heard. I knew then that there was no question of his ability."

Governor Cornwell said that there was no reason for "any one in the world" to feel antagonism toward Mr. Davis and that this fact would be a great asset in his behalf.

"No one doubts his splendid attainments, and his fine character," said the Governor. "The editorial in THE NEW YORK TIMES headed 'A Great Democrat,' summed up John Davis better than I can. He is respected and loved. There has never been a single thing in his personal or official life that any one can point a finger to in derogation.

"Democrats are all for him, and while many Republicans would be unable to vote for him because of party pledges, I do not believe you can find one Republican of standing in West Virginia who would not say he is one of the really big men of this country. His popularity in West Virginia was shown by his great victories when he ran for Congress in normally Republican districts, which had been represented by that party for years."

The attitude of organized labor in West Virginia toward Mr. Davis is much discussed, but the general view seems to be that labor would support him, because labor believes he would be fair to the workers if he were President. C. E. Weymouth of Clarksburg, who yesterday said that he did not believe that labor would support Mr. Davis because labor in West Virginia was largely Republican in sympathy, submitted this statement for publication today:

"Although it has been my observation for the most part that laboring men are Republicans in their political faith, I can seen no reason why they as a class should be opposed to the candidacy of John W. Davis for President on the Democratic ticket. Mr. Davis, so far as I am informed, has always been liberal in his treatment of labor and won many friends while a member of Congress by his unselfish action in defending the workers' interests in the Anti-Injunction bill. I feel that as President he could be relied upon to give the same fair consideration to the interests of the workers as he has in the past."

Weymouth is editor of the West Virginia Labor News, a member of the Executive Committee of the West Virginia Non-Partisan League and of the Clarksburg Trades and Labor Council, Clarksburg Typographical Union, Clarksburg Local Amalgamated Steel and Iron Workers, and Clarksburg Local, American Federation of Musicians.

It is pointed out in Parkersburg that when Mr. Davis broke the Republican hold in the First Congressional District of West Virginia, he won his victory in a territory filled with workingmen. This district then included such manufacturing and industrial centres as Wheeling, Morgantown, Fairmont and Clarksburg. Many hundreds of workmen are employed in this district in the coal, coke, gas and oil industries.

"He can reach the laboring men with his speeches," said one of his admirers today. "They can follow everything he says with ease. You never get the idea that he cannot 'get over.' He speaks simply and has a splendid power of elucidation, even though his style in the back counties is not different from that which he uses in the cities or in Congress."

TAMMANY PLANS NEW SMITH BOOM

Leaders Believe Governor's Candidacy for President Would Help in Blocking McAdoo.

Tammany is again considering the placing of Governor Alfred E. Smith in nomination for President at the Democratic National Convention at San Francisco, it was learned yesterday. Not even the most enthusiastic Tammany man expects that the Governor will receive the nomination, but his candidacy, in the view of the Tammany leaders, will do their organization no harm and may aid their plan to block the nomination of William G. McAdoo and to bring about the nomination of a candidate, such as Governor James M. Cox of Ohio or Governor Edward I. Edwards of New Jersey, who favors a liberal enforcement of the Federal prohibition amendment. Tammany and its allies are reported to have abandoned hope of getting an anti-prohibition plank in the platform.

The suggestion to put forward Governor Smith, considered and apparently abandoned several weeks ago, was said to have been revived because of assurances from delegates from other States that they would be pleased to vote for New York's Governor on two or three early ballots.

If Governor Smith is placed in nomination, assurances have been received, it was said by Tammany men, that he will receive scattering votes from delegates from Florida, Louisiana, Alabama and Oklahoma, although the delegation from the last named State is instructed for Senator Robert L. Owen.

It is the belief of some of the Tammany leaders that the candidacy of Governor Smith may not only help to avert the fight against the "unit rule" threatened by Mayor George R. Lunn of Schenectady and Samuel Seabury, but may attract a few delegates from other States to the combination already formed. This combination, besides Tammany and the majority of the New York State delegation, includes Thomas Taggart and the delegates from Indiana, the Illinois organization, of which the late Roger C. Sullivan was the head, and the delegates from New Jersey, Ohio and Kentucky.

It was said to be the present intention of this combination to put forward as candidates three Governors, Smith, Cox and Edwards. It was said that Governor Cox probably would be the ultimate choice of this group, the members of which are expected to stand out until the last against the nomination of Mr. McAdoo.

With a recollection of the part William J. Bryan played in blocking the nomination of Champ Clark at the Baltimore Convention in 1912 and in bringing about the first nomination of Woodrow Wilson, the leaders of the liberal enforcement combination were said to have decided not to risk the wrath of the Nebraskan by attempting to get a "wet" plank in the Democratic platform. Governor Cox is said to have always been a staunch supporter of Mr. Bryan in the past and to be on friendly terms with him personally. The supporters of Governor Cox were said to count somewhat upon this to prevent extreme opposition on the part of Mr. Bryan to their candidate.

BUTLER A CANDIDATE FOR PRESIDENCY ONLY

Will Not Accept Any Other Nomination, Says Manager—More Delegates Pledge Support.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler has been approached with suggestions during the last few weeks that he should withdraw as a candidate for the Republican nomination for President and agree to accept the nomination for Vice President, appointment as Secretary of State under the next Republican President or the nomination for Governor, but has declined them all, according to a statement issued yesterday by Justice John R. Davies, his campaign manager. "Dr. Butler is not seeking office," said Justice Davies, "and has no intention of surrendering his duties as President of Columbia University unless he should be chosen for the Presidency."

Justice Davies said that Dr. Butler had received personal visits or messages from delegates to the Republican National Convention from more than a dozen States, who have for their first choice either General Wood, Senator Johnson, Governor Lowden, Senator Harding or Governor Coolidge, and who assured him that they will transfer their support to him, if it becomes apparent by the third or fourth ballot that their first choice cannot be nominated.

"The undercurrent of Dr. Butler's support is particularly strong in the New England States, in New Jersey, throughout the Middle West, on the Pacific Coast and along the Mexican border," said Justice Davies. "Explanation of this appears to be in the fact that Dr. Butler is thoroughly familiar with the political and business needs of the people in those sections of the country, which he has often visited and where he has a large number of personal friends."

ASKS INVESTIGATION OF W. H. HAYS'S FUND

Former Governor Campbell of Ohio Tells Kenyon Committee He Collected Huge Amount.

SEES PLOT TO BUY ELECTION

Asserts Business Men Were Coerced and Charges This Policy Is Source of All the Corruption.

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 30.—In a letter made public here today, former Governor James E. Campbell, Chairman of the Ohio delegation to the Democratic National Convention at San Francisco, asks that the Kenyon committee, now investigating alleged "slush" funds, go into what he terms the original source of the trouble—the huge advance fund alleged to have been raised at the instance of National Chairman Will H. Hays of the Republican National Committee. He calls attention to the charges made several months ago by Governor Cox of Ohio. At that time Colonel William Cooper Procter of Cincinnati, who has advanced more than $500,000 to the Wood fund, replied that the charges were "too silly to talk about." Mr. Campbell's letter, which is addressed to Senator Pomerene, a member of the committee, follows:

"My Dear Senator: The people of Ohio have read with profound amazement the evidence which your committee has adduced in its investigation into the disbursement of funds by candidates for the Presidency.

"I need not tell you, after your own experience in the 1916 election, how deeply the people of this country resent this debauchery in politics, nor is it necessary for me to ask you that the investigation continue until it has covered every phase of the campaign, including the raising of vast funds for election as well as for the nomination.

"In Ohio, the Democrats are not ashamed, in fact are proud, of the contributions, small though they are, that have been made in behalf of Governor Cox in furtherance of his candidacy. Nor is there a single cent of expense, as related by Mr. Moore, for which there need be an apology. This brings me to remind you that it was Governor Cox who first called attention of the nation to the impending saturnalia of expenditure. He did this upon information brought to him by Republican citizens of the State, who came not as partisans, but as Americans to confide that they were held up and forced to contribute to a colossal and unheard of campaign fund for the election of 1920, and that the initial drive would be in Ohio because of its industrial strength and wealth, and because Ohio is pivotal in political contests. These men, they said, were told that the very safety of their business depended upon the raising of enormous sums to be at the disposition of Mr. Will H. Hays and his lieutenants, in the Republican National Committee and allied State organizations. Not principle, not policy, but pocketbook only was to win.

"The situation now present before your committee was long ago foretold by Governor Cox, who at various times in the past has announced that some one was trying to buy an underhold on the Government of the United States. When the conspiracy fund was in the process of collection and business men had been ruthlessly coerced into giving enormous sum, representation was made that with this fund the election of a Republican candidate to the Presidency would be assured beyond the shadow of a doubt, and 'big business' might come into 'its own.'

"It was only natural that every man who had the slightest show at all for the nomination should follow the policy Will Hays and himself attempt the nomination by purchase—thus corruption in this way has bred corruption. It has brought forth its natural product. I submit to you, Senator, the suggestion that your committee go to the very base of this trouble and that such base, as Governor Cox has long since demonstrated, lies in the plan promulgated by the Republican National Committee itself.

"How unfortunate it is that the faith of the American people in their Government should be blasted by the spectacle of a Presidency on the auction block—and that spectacle in the very hour when America seeks to demonstrate that selfish objectives are not her purpose of existence.

"Senator Pomerene, through you as our representative, we implore your committee to help restore to the citizenship of this country faith in American political life.

Sincerely,
JAMES E. CAMPBELL.

Hon. Atlee Pomerene,
Washington, D. C.

JOHNSON'S PRIMARY VOTE.

Has 250,000 Plurality in Ten States, Appeal to Delegates Says.

The contention that Senator Hiram W. Johnson of California has demonstrated his popularity by obtaining a plurality of more than 250,000 votes over his "leading opponent" in the ten States in which he has been a primary candidate, has been put forward in a letter to delegates to the Republican National Convention, made public yesterday by Angus McSween, his Eastern campaign manager. More than 150,000 of this aggregate plurality was obtained by Senator Johnson in California, where he led Herbert Hoover by 160,000.

North Dakota	30,573	987
South Dakota	26,501	31,285
Michigan	156,939	112,568
Nebraska	65,161	42,385
Montana	21,034	6,804
New Jersey	51,692	52,909
Maryland	8,059	15,900
Indiana	79,840	85,708
California	370,905	210,561
Oregon	45,917	43,759
Total	854,421	602,846

"Placing these States in the order of their geographical location, California, Oregon, Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Michigan, Indiana, Maryland and New Jersey," said Mr. McSween, "it will be seen that they form a slightly irregular chain extending from one end of the continent to the other, and demonstrate that the strength of Senator Johnson is evenly distributed throughout the whole country.

"Senator Johnson's strength is conspicuous in the group of so-called doubtful States, where admittedly the decisive battle will be fought in the coming national campaign. In the Far West his leadership is conceded. In four of the five Middle Western States in which he competed as a primary candidate he was victorious. Illinois, where in deference to Governor Lowden he did not enter the campaign, gave him the greatest 'write-in' indorsement in the history of American politics. In the Far Eastern State of New Jersey he polled a vote that astounded political observers, and in Indiana he was almost equally successful."

OFFER REPUBLICANS' LIVING COST PLANK

Currency and Credit Deflation to Reduce Prices Reported by Platform Board.

WOULD SELECT IMMIGRANTS

Higher Standard Urged, with Qualified Admitted Only in Limited Numbers.

Deflation of currency and credit as the way to reduce the high cost of living and limitation of immigration, by insistence upon a higher standard for immigrants and the admission of even those of good quality only up to the number that can be readily assimilated, are recommended in reports of subcommittees of the Committee on Policies and Platform of the Republican National Committee, made public yesterday. This committee was appointed by Will H. Hays, Republican National Chairman, to prepare a tentative platform for submission to the Committee on Resolutions of the Republican National Convention. Presumably its report will form the basis of the Republican national platform.

The Sub-Committee on the High Cost of Living, of which Helen Rogers Reid is Chairman and Albert Shaw Vice Chairman, condemns the practice of the United States Treasury since the armistice in permitting certificate borrowing at what are declared to be artificially low rates and calls for the cessation of this practice as the first step to prevent further inflation. An increasing discount rate is then recommended to bring about an intelligent reduction in the existing volume of bank credit and note circulation.

The report also condemns the excess profits tax as having operated to increase prices and criticises the 10 per cent. cost plus system for war contracts as having established a level of costs and prices never before reached in this country.

Fixed Incomes Suffer Most.

The report states that wholesale commodity prices have risen 153 per cent. since 1913, retail food prices 100 per cent. and the aggregate of several items, such as food, clothing, fuel and light, housing furniture which enter into an ordinary family budget, 83 per cent., according to the United States Bureau of Labor. The effect of this abnormal increase is stated to have inflicted serious injury upon all classes depending upon fixed incomes or upon relatively adjustable earnings, including those in possession of savings deposits, insurance policies and investment holdings, those dependent upon pensions and annuities and fixed allowances and those receiving salaries and wages.

Wages of favorably located workers are stated to have kept pace and in some cases to have exceeded the rise in prices, which are said to have conferred excessive gains upon favored groups of manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers. In considering the cause of the advancing prices, the report says:

"The prime cause of the 'High Cost of Living,' has been, first and foremost, fifty per cent. increase in the purchasing power of the dollar, due to the gross expansion of our currency and credit.

"As compared with the spring of 1914—the eve of the Great War—the people of the United States are carrying on their business at the present time with practically twice as much money and bank deposits.

In addition to Inflation as the primary cause of high prices, there have been important contributory causes: war-time taxation, strikes, shortage and disproportionate wages, lavish public expenditure and private extravagance.

Would Stop Credit Inflation.

Extravagance in Government expenditure, according to the report, has contributed to the accumulation of a floating debt, the periodic renewal of which must operate to check falling prices. The report states that the evils of price inflation are in large part beyond remedy, but makes the following suggestions to bring about some reduction:

"The first step in correction of the high cost of living is to stop further credit inflation on the part of the Treasury in the form of certificate borrowing. The engines producing inflation must be arrested before they may safely be reversed.'

"Progressive inflation arising out of the Treasury's borrowing once checked there should be a corresponding but intelligent reduction in the volume of existing bank credit and note circulation. An increasing discount rate is the instrument for arresting such tendencies. Preference in bank credits should be given to industries engaged in the production of essentials.

"Plan and fashion as we will, the country is in for a prolonged period of heavy taxation. Facing this prospect, every effort should be made to use those particular taxes which will do least harm to the economic and social life of the nation and at the same time realize the largest measure of justice as to incidence and distribution. Such policies are certain to contribute to the corrective forces making for a reduction of living costs.

"In summary: Rigorous avoidance of further inflation in our Government borrowing, courageous but intelligent deflation of credit and contraction of currency, heightened production of goods and services, public economy and private thrift, revision of taxation as to distribution and incidence—these are the approaches to successful attack upon the high cost of living."

A certain restriction of immigration and revision of the naturalization laws, including a provision for the naturalization of foreign-born women, are recommended in the report of the Sub-Committee on Immigration. The report upholds the principle of the deportation of alien anarchists, but mildly criticises Attorney General Palmer by stating that there is room for improvement in the way this law has been administered. The report says:

Selective Immigration Plan.

"Within recent years the conviction has become widespread in the country that selective measures alone are inadequate to safeguard the United States against the evils of immigration. There is a strong demand for some positive limitation of the number of immigrants, even of good quality. The principle underlying the wise quantitative regulation is that no more immigrants should be admitted than could be speedily and safely assimilated.

"The task of reducing this principle to a practical working basis requires the harmonizing of the conflicting interests of capital and labor with reference to immigration. Capital naturally sees the advantages of a large foreign labor supply, while labor feels its competition immediately and painfully. Both these interests are legitimate, and a wise solution should represent the mean ground between the two.

"A plan widely advocated is a limitation of the immigration of each ethnic group on the basis of a certain percentage of the number of that group naturalized and resident in the United States.

"It is desirable in a democracy that no large proportion of its adult population should lack the full status of citizenship. It is important, accordingly, that all arbitrary obstacles to naturalization should be removed on the other end. Naturalization should be made dependent upon genuine assimilation. Our naturalization law needs thorough revision in order to establish new tests which will guarantee the fitness of the alien to participate in the duties and responsibilities as well as the rights and privileges of American citizenship."

FEDERATION CAMPAIGNS IN THIRTY-TWO STATES

Has Records of Senators and Representatives it Considers Hostile, to Be Opposed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—The American Federation of Labor announced tonight through its Non-Partisan Political Campaign Committee that it is conducting "intensive Statewide" campaigns in thirty-two States, in addition to energetic local campaigns in the other States. There are no Congressional elections in the thirty-two States where Statewide efforts are being made. The Federation authorized this statement:

"The records of Senators in all of those States are in the hands of the central labor bodies, non-partisan campaign committees and local unions of those States. These records disclose the manner in which Senators voted on measures of interest to labor and are calculated to place before the voters the facts about those Senators who are seeking re-election.

"In at least fifteen States there are intensive campaigns under way in important Congressional districts, and the number will increase as the campaign progresses. Reports of the organization of campaign committees are coming to American Federation of Labor headquarters at the rate of more than a hundred a day, a rate that has been maintained as a minimum since the first call for committee organization was issued more than two months ago.

"Reports from all sources indicate a greater enthusiasm than has ever marked a labor campaign. Typical of reports received daily is one from Ohio stating that seventeen representatives of central labor bodies from forty cities with the Executive Council of the State Federation of Labor, in which the non-partisan campaign was enthusiastically indorsed.

"The masses of our people realize the danger that confronts the republic as a result of legislative reaction and inefficiency. Everywhere the determination is being made clear to defeat those who have betrayed the people and to return to the next Congress men who will understand the needs of the people, and whose records are guarantees that they will remain faithful.

"Reports of success already achieved promise much for the future. There is every indication that the people are alert and determined. America is a nation where progress is natural and where reaction cannot long persist. November will mark the turning point. The flag of warning is up for reaction in all of its manifestations."

ASKS PRO-LEAGUE PLANK.

Non-Partisan Society Makes Appeal to Republican Delegates.

Inclusion of a plank favoring the League of Nations in the Republican national platform is proposed in a letter sent to every New York delegate to the Republican National Convention by the Non-Partisan League of Nations Society, 603 Fifth Avenue. The letter, made public yesterday by Arthur Hodges, Secretary of the society, follows:

"The Non-Partisan League of Nations Society believes in the immediate ratification of the League covenant in some reasonable form. We therefore urge an unequivocal statement in its favor in the Republican platform. Our policy will be to strenuously oppose at the coming election either party or candidate whose success might jeopardize its ratification."

properly. In fact, a rather general impression seems to exist that the expenditures were largely for legitimate campaign purposes. At the same time one hears much comment to the effect that no man capable of holding the office of President should be compelled to gather large sums to further his candidacy.

Two Views of the Lowden Fund.

Two views are expressed with reference to the disclosures before the Senate committee as to the fund used by the management of Governor Lowden of Illinois to stimulate his pre-convention campaign. The testimony showed that $379,000 was furnished by Governor Lowden and his wife and that very little came from other sources.

One view is that the amount contributed by the Governor and Mrs. Lowden is too large for any one man to employ out of his private means to further his own ambition for public office. The method is open to criticism, it is contended, and likely to create a bad impression with the electorate. The other view is that Governor Lowden felt that by using his own means he would not be placed in a position of being beholden to anybody, and thus would escape criticism of seeking a political angel to back him in the gamble that will be determined at the Chicago convention.

It was not until this morning that the majority of Senators and Representatives had the opportunity of knowing of the testimony given late yesterday afternoon before the Senate committee that $1,180,000 had been collected in behalf of General Wood's primary contests. For this reason it is too early to attempt to estimate the impression produced by this testimony.

Criticism is already heard, however, although a disposition exists to differentiate between the voluntary contributions to the Wood fund and the utilization of large private means by Governor Lowden. In other words, the claim is made that under the exactions imposed by State primary laws General Wood's managers were obliged to appeal for financial support to those who advocated his candidacy to enable him to place his qualifications for the Presidential office before the people.

Whether the Senate investigation has been productive of good or had a contrary effect is a matter of discussion in Washington. That the inception of the inquiry was a desire to advance the interests of Senator Hiram Johnson of California is generally accepted. Coupled with that desire is an apparent effort to injure the candidacy of General Wood.

Throughout the recent events in the Republican contest for the Presidential nomination General Wood has had to bear the brunt of the combined opposition of those who supported his opponents.

On Common Ground.

The Old Guard and the radical Johnsonites found common ground for effort. Politicians here declare the Old Guard cares as little for Johnson as it does for Wood, but it suited Old Guard purposes to have Johnson go out among the people with the intention of reducing the advantage Wood had gained. If Johnson had gained such strength that he stood a major chance of obtaining the Presidential nomination, it is asserted, the Old Guard, would have been glad to have made terms with Wood and every other candidate to keep Johnson from getting the honor.

As things turned out, Johnson made gains that caused the Old Guard to recognize he had attained a dangerous position of party ascendency. Since that recognition came, it is pointed out, the Old Guard leaders have been showing a consideration for Johnson's feelings amazing to those who knew their real sentiments toward him.

That Johnson will take advantage of the disclosures made before the Senate committee as to heavy expenditures in behalf of the candidacies of Wood and Lowden is taken for granted. His views on the subject are expected to be exploited on the convention floor and to form the nucleus of the final effort to eliminate Wood as the convention's choice, in the hope that this will help Johnson's chances.

Will Hear Hoover Men from California.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—Though far from completion of its work, the Senate committee investigating pre-convention expenditures and pledges in the Presidential campaign will not sit tomorrow. It will hear on Tuesday, for the first time, the statements of men who handled the primary campaign in California in the interests of Herbert Hoover, and will inquire further into the State and National expenditures made in behalf of Senator Hiram Johnson. During the committee's eleven-hour session yesterday allegations concerning the use of large sums in the California fight were thrown into the examination.

The committee also is said to be planning further inquiry into the candidacy of W. G. McAdoo on the Democratic side, and to gather more information as to expenditures in the Ohio Republican primary.

Subpoenas have been sent out in several directions for witnesses, and it is presumed that more light will be sought on the details of the campaign made for General Leonard Wood. A. A. Sprague, Chairman of the National Campaign Fund, testified yesterday as to the use of a campaign fund of $1,180,000 for General Wood, of which $721,000 was advanced directly or indirectly by Colonel William Cooper Procter.

WOMAN FOR SENATOR IS NAMED BY LABOR

State Convention Nominates Rose Schneiderman and Picks Six State Candidates.

FAVORS "DRY" REFERENDUM

Demands Impeachment of Palmer, Removal of Burleson, Recognition of Ireland and Russia.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., May 30.—Selection of six candidates for State officers to be voted for at the next general election and a fight over a plank in the platform touching on prohibition occupied the greater part of today's closing sessions of the convention of the American Labor Party of New York State.

Two women were given places on the ticket. Miss Rose Schneiderman of New York was nominated for United States Senator and Mrs. William J. Fink of Catskill was the convention's choice for State Controller. Other candidates chosen are:

The Nominating Committee, in reporting its slate to the convention, failed to recommend candidates for the offices of Governor, State Engineer and Surveyor and Associate Judges of the Court of Appeals, suggesting that their selection be left to the State Committee.

Over objection of a score or more delegates, who demanded that the convention nominate a full State ticket, the conference accepted the committee's report.

The Platform Committee, in making its report, recommended a plank providing for local option on light wines and beers. This brought a storm of protest, women delegates leading the opposition. The convention took a recess at noon without reaching a decision on the question, and when the afternoon session was opened the committee substituted a plank favoring the submission of prohibition to a referendum. This was unanimously adopted.

The Platform.

Other planks adopted dealt with the high cost of living and the housing situation.

The planks incorporated in the platform seek to provide:

"Immediate restoration of free speech, free press, freedom of assembly and all the civil rights granted under the Constitution.

"Reduction of the cost of living by bringing the farmer into direct contact with the consumer through co-operation, publicly owned terminal markets, dehydration plants and milk distributing stations, and by empowering municipalities to sell necessities of life such as coal, bread, ice and milk.

"The building of adequate homes by regarding housing as a public utility and by providing public credit for the construction of houses on a nonprofit basis.

"State insurance against the hazard of industry, such as unemployment, illness, old age, and protection of motherhood, fatherhood, widowhood and childhood.

"Equal economic, political and legal rights for all, irrespective of race, color or creed

"The elimination of boss rule in legislation and the introduction of economy into administration by the adoption of the executive budget.

"The extension and democratization of our educational system.

"The initiative, referendum and recall of all elective officials."

The fight on the plank urging local option on light wines and beer threatened to result in the woman delegates bolting. Mrs. Maud Swartz of New York declared: "We women serve notice that if you are going to make this a 'booze party' we are prepared to withdraw."

For Ireland and Russia.

A resolution demanding that the "American Government take no side in the internal struggles in Russia and refuse support to Poland or any other country which is attacking Russia and resume free trade relations with Russia immediately" was adopted.

Another resolution adopted demands the immediate recognition "of the republic of Ireland, and that the principle of self-determination be fully applied in practice as well as in principle to the peoples of Egypt, India and the other oppressed nations."

Resolutions also were approved calling for the removal from office of Postmaster General Burleson and for the impeachment by Congress of Attorney General Palmer.

Other resolutions adopted would provide for an eight-hour day and a maximum forty-four-hour week; that lynching be made a Federal crime; increased wages for postal employes, public ownership and democratic operation of railroads, and the creation of a State milk commission.

POLITICAL NEGLECT CHARGED BY WOMEN

FEW CHOSEN AS DELEGATES

Republicans Blamed for Continued Delay in Ratification of the Suffrage Amendment.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—In a statement issued here tonight the National Woman's Party seeks to show that women will have no important part in the national conventions of the Democratic or Republican Party, owing to the continued delay in the ratification of the Federal suffrage amendment.

In the June issue of The Suffragist, official organ of the party, a leading editorial will declare the Republican Party "is responsible for the continued delay in the ratification of the suffrage amendment," and that "if millions of women are excluded from the polls next November, as millions have already been excluded from primaries and State conventions, the Republican Party will be to blame."

The day's statement of the party says in part:

"Women are not on an equal basis with men in party management. They have had comparatively little share in selecting delegates to the national conventions. They have been excluded from a majority of the Presidential preference primaries, and they will attend the national conventions as delegates in insignificant numbers.

"Of the 984 delegates to the Republican National Convention only twenty-five will be women. Of the 1,092 delegates to the Democratic Convention only sixty-nine will be women.

"The 17,000,000 women eligible to vote for the next President whether or not the Federal suffrage amendment is ratified are thus accorded only a 2 per cent. representation in the choice of the Republican nominee and only a 6 per cent. representation in the choice of the Democratic candidate, although they represent approximately 35 per cent. of the total number of men and women eligible to vote for President next November.

"Women are more largely represented in the list of alternates to the conventions, 153 being accredited alternates to the Republican Convention and 130 to the Democratic Convention.

"Figures compiled by the Woman's Party also indicate that women have played a comparatively minor part in the selection of delegates to the two conventions. These facts were secured from the Secretaries of State and Republican and Democratic State Chairmen in the various States.

"In the expression of popular preference for Presidential candidates women have also been allowed comparatively little share, in twenty-one States Presidential preference primaries are held, according to the official list of the Republican National Committee. Women have been admitted on equal terms with men in only seven—California, Michigan, Montana, Nebraska, Oregon, South Dakota and Texas. They have been excluded from fourteen, five of these being States where women have won the right to vote for President but have not been allowed a voice in choosing their party's candidate.

"Women have not been admitted to equality in party management. No women are members of the Republican National Committee. No women are members of the Republican National Executive Committee. No women are on the sub-committees appointed last December to manage the pre-convention activities of the party, committees on organization, publicity, finance and conventions. On the Platform and Norms Committee of 171 members only 19 members are women.

"There is a Republican National Council composed of twenty-four members, four of whom are women. There is also a women's division of the Republican National Committee, headed by Mrs. John G. South, Chairman, which works through or with a Republican women's Executive Committee, headed by Miss Mary Garrett Hay. These groups of women have no vote in the Republican National Committee except as proxies for men.

"Officials so far selected for the Chicago Convention by the National Committee are men, with the exception of three women Assistant Secretaries. Senator Lodge, confirmed anti-suffragist, is Temporary Chairman of the convention.

"In the Democratic Party women have been placed in the National Executive Committee with a status equal to that of the men members. Fourteen women are now members of this committee, and three more have been asked to join, it is stated, with the intention to bringing the total number of women up to seventeen, the number of men on the committee. On the Democratic National Committee women are as yet only associates, having no direct vote except as proxies for men. There are presumably forty-eight women members of this associate national committee, but as a matter of fact there are only forty-two at the present time. Under the National Committee there is a woman's bureau corresponding to the Republican woman's division.

"Officials so far appointed for the Democratic Convention consist entirely of men, with the exception of two women on the Committee of Arrangements in charge of the pre-convention activities. There are twenty-eight men on this committee."

KING ALBERT JOINS IN HONORING DEAD

WASHINGTON, May 30.—President Wilson today received a message from King Albert saying that the graves of the American dead in Belgium would be decorated "according to American usage." The message from the King as made public at the White House reads:

"On the occasion of Decoration Day I wish to express to the American Government and to the people and to the army and navy of the United States the sentiments of gratitude and admiration which Belgium feels toward the heroic American soldiers, sailors and marines who have fallen in the great war for the cause of civilization and for the liberty of the world.

"The Belgian army is proud and happy to have fought shoulder to shoulder with the American forces.

"As a token of that feeling it has been decided to have the graves of American officers and soldiers in Belgium ornated on Decoration Day according to the American usage.

"Remembering the cordial welcome given me by the whole American nation on the occasion of my visit to the United States in October, 1919, I am glad to have the opportunity, which the patriotic celebration of May 30 gives me, to express to them gratitude and profound sympathy."

Sir Auckland Geddes, the British Ambassador, today sent to Secretary Baker of the War Department, Secretary Daniels of the Navy Department, and John McElroy, Commander of the Grand Army of the Republic, the following message:

"In the name of my sovereign, His Majesty King George, and of the British peoples throughout the world, I hail America's sons and daughters who have died that freedom may live."

FLOWERS RAIN FOR DEAD.

Atlantic City Fliers Honor Heroes of Aeronautics.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 30.—While a great squadron of airplanes wheeled overhead, dropping wreaths and cut flower upon the waters surrounding the Steel Pier, the ten-day sessions of the Third Pan-American Aeronautical Congress closed here today with impressive memorial services in honor of those who gave their lives in the advancement of aeronautics. Thirty-two countries were represented.

The patrol took the air from the Curtiss station at the Inlet and the Airport on a wireless telephone signal from the radio station in the convention hall. As the Rev. Henry M. Mellen of the First Presbyterian Church, this city, finished the invocation the seaplanes from the station met the landplanes from the Airport. Thousands stood with bared heads as 2,000 red and white roses and many wreaths dropped to the ocean.

Colonel Horace Hickam, chief of the information group of the Army Air Service, in a British one-seater, led the landplanes, directing the manoeuvres from high above them. The great six-passenger Larsen monoplanes were piloted by Bert Acosta. The navy machines were in command of Commander J. Robinett, aboard one of the twelve-passenger two-motored seaplanes from the Rockaway station. A flotilla of landplanes from the Quantico, Va., Marine Corps station joined in the demonstration. Fourteen machines were in the air at one time, performing evolutions for over an hour.

With the arrival of the last planes here today a high record for aerial attendance was made. One hundred and sixty-two delegates came to the convention by the sky route, while sixty aircraft concerns participated, six different departments of the United States Government being represented.

NATION'S WAR DEAD ARE HONORED HERE

TRIBUTE TO ROOSEVELT

Tablet Unveiled in Church of St. Nicholas—30,000 Veterans to March Today.

The nation's war dead received their tribute yesterday on the battlefields of Belgium and France and in the churches and cemeteries here.

Several thousand persons attended memorial services o' the sheep meadow in Central Park under the auspices of the United Spanish War Veterans, in conjunction with the American Legion. A parade of the 12th Regiment veterans, from the armory, Columbus Avenue and Sixty-second Street, to the Park preceded the ceremonies. The speakers were Assemblyman Martin G. McCue, Dr. Thomas R. Killilea, William J. Lee and Mgr. John P. Chidwick, former chaplain of the Maine. After the services, wreaths were placed on the statue of General Sherman, Fifth Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street.

With impressive ceremony a bronze tablet, overlaid with gold, was unveiled in the Collegiate Church of St. Nicholas, Fifth Avenue and Forty-eighth Street, in memory of the late Theodore Roosevelt. The tablet bears this inscription:

In Memorium,
Theodore Roosevelt,
1858-1919.
Erected A. D. 1920.

The unveiling followed a sermon by the pastor, the Rev. Malcom James McLeod, who took for his subject "Our Honored Dead," extolling the qualities of the deceased soldier and statesman.

Country Needs a Roosevelt Now.

"Theodore Roosevelt," said Dr. McLeod, "was frank and straight-forward in his method of going about things. He called black black, and white white. Never in the history of this country did we need a Roosevelt more. Theodore Roosevelt was known for his bellicose spirit—not because he loved to fight, but because he was ready and willing to fight for right.

"There are great evils confronting the country today—the selfish capitalist, the red agitator, who works in the dark, and that unholy individual, the profiteer. If Colonel Roosevelt were here, he would know how to handle these evils. We can well imagine him curbing the selfish capitalist, and the red agitator, and driving forth the profiteer."

Dr. McLeod said that Roosevelt never had cared what a man's religious belief might be in the matter of his friendship, association or every-day dealings, but did care what a man's actions were. The pastor paid a tribute to Roosevelt's simple family life. A letter from Mrs. Roosevelt conveyed her regret at being unable to attend.

In the presence of High Commissioner Maurice Casenave, representing the French Government, wreaths were placed on the tomb of Etienne Marie Bechet, de de Rochefontaine, in St. Paul's Church yard by the New York Chapter, Sons of the American Revolution. The ceremony took place immediately after morning services. Brigadier Gen. Oliver B. Bridgman was master of ceremonies, introducing Edward Hagaman Hall, who delivered the address appreciative of the aid France gave the United States in the early days. Commissioner Casenave expressed the thanks of his country. Others who spoke were Rear Admiral Bradley Fiske, U. S. N., retired, and Lieutenant Col. Charles Reese Lloyd, U. S. A.

Annual memorial services of the Hebrew Veterans of the Wars of the Republic were held in Carnegie Hall. Nearly 3,000 persons were there. Judge Abram I. Elkus presided. Others who took part were Rabbi Sidney E. Goldstein, Dr. Stephen S. Wise, Maurice Simmons, Major Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, the Rev. Benjamin Friedman and the Rev. Josef Rosenblatt.

Judge Elkus branded as false the charge that Jews planned to dominate the world. He said that the Jews everywhere fought for the right, especially in the United States, where they have fought continuously for the ideals of Americanism. He praised President Wilson and said that a League of Nations would honor the dead because it would perpetuate the ideals for which they died. General Edwards, telling of the part Jewish boys had played in the war, declared that a high percentage of them had picked the infantry for their service.

The military mass, for many years celebrated in the Brooklyn Navy Yard, was held in the Church of the Nativity, Classon Avenue and Madison Street, Brooklyn. The celebrant was the Right Rev. Mgr. Chidwick, and the preacher was the Rev. John L. Belford. Ex-Ambassador Gerard was the principal speaker at the exercises in the Central Y. M. C. A., Brooklyn.

Mayor Hylan and Frederick A. Wallis, Commissioner of Immigration, were the speakers last night at the services in the First Methodist Church, Temple Street and the Crescent, Astoria. The Rev. Arthur J. Smith, pastor, presided. About 2,000 were there. Music was furnished by the Police Department Band.

Plans for Parades Today.

Thirty thousand veterans will march today in the parades in the five boroughs. The Manhattan parade will start at 9 o'clock. The line of march will be from Seventy-third to Ninety-second Street along Riverside Drive. All posts of the G. A. R. will be in line, and escorting the aged veterans will be the American Legion, veterans of the latest war, with Lieut. Col. Watkins as Division Marshal. The legionnaires will parade as follows:

2,500 AMERICAN DEAD HONORED IN BRITAIN

DEAN SEES BONDS CEMENTED

Says at St. Margaret's Spiritual Heritage of Two Nations Is Preserved.

LONDON, May 30.—America's Memorial Day for her soldier dead had an unprecedented observance in the British Isles today. The graves of 2,500 American soldiers and sailors buried in British soil were adorned with wreaths and American flags—a tribute from surviving comrades in the American Legion and the members of other Anglo-American organizations.

Services were held at the graves in the cemeteries at Glasgow, Liverpool and Manchester, but the most significant homage was paid at St. Margaret's Church, the official church of the Commons, where Canon Carnegie, sub-dean of Westminster Abbey, lauded the deeds of the American "hero dead." He gave assurances that English appreciation of the day's meaning was one of "more than sympathetic sentiment."

Referring to the presence of American and British official governmental and military and naval representatives, Dean Carnegie expressed the conviction that their unity in honoring those who had fallen betokened a maintenance and strengthening of the friendship between the two peoples, to which "those we reverence today paid such glorious testimony."

He declared that the men who had fallen proved the genuineness of that friendship, and deplored the fact that "the complex interplay of world affairs must necessarily lead to minor misunderstandings." But, he added, because "the main undercurrents of American and British life are identical," he firmly believed the common spiritual heritage of the two nations had been preserved intact, and therefore both would ignore any temporary "meaningless dust clouds engendered by selfish interests or sectional stupidities."

John W. Davis, the American Ambassador, read the spiritual lesson. The Lord Chief Justice, the Earl of Reading, Major Gen. Sir John Headlam, Robert P. Skinner, the American Consul General, and many other prominent Americans and Englishmen attended. A party of civil war veterans occupied the front pews.

Services were held at Queenstown in memory of the Lusitania victims. A large American flag was spread over the beflowered graves. The Bishop of Clyne, the acting American Consul John E. McAndrews and Admiral Sir Reginald Tupper and other military and naval officers attended. After the services a squadron of British soldiers sounded "the last post."

Services were held at Islay, Hebrides, in memory of 500 victims of torpedoed ships.

BERLIN GRAVES REMEMBERED.

Private Gallon of Brooklyn One of Two Who Rest There.

BERLIN, May 30.—The graves of David Gallon, of Brooklyn, a private in the 106th Infantry, and Adolf John Schulz, of Somers, Mont., of the 308th Infantry, who were buried at Hasenheid in the outskirts of Berlin, were decorated today by the American Commission here. A brief address was delivered by Ellis Loring Dresel, the head of the commission.

Private Gallon was captured at Cambral on Sept. 23, 1918, and died Nov. 11 of that year in the Doeberitz camp. Private Schuls died on Nov. 17, 1918, in a Berlin hospital. Both men had been wounded in the early Autumn fighting on the western front.

VERGENNES, Vt., May 30.—Examination of the books of the First National Bank of this city, whose cashier, Charles Strong, committed suicide last Thursday when examiners appeared for an inspection of accounts, has disclosed shortages of $15,000, according to a statement tonight by the President, Oliver H. Sherman.

WALLACE SOUNDS NOTE WILSON STRUCK IN 1919

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 30.—A year ago this day Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States, stood upon a platform at Suresnes Cemetery, facing rows of little white crosses marking the graves of American soldiers, and told an assemblage of diplomats of the world that America, in all her spirit and genius, would work to complete the task for the accomplishment of which these men had laid down their lives.

With tears filling his eyes, he recalled that, as Commander in Chief of the armies of the United States, he had sent these fighting men to France to die, and said it was unthinkable that he or any other American could betray them. They had died to make the world a better world, and he declared it the sacred duty of those who lived to finish the work of those who filled the graves upon that hillside.

Ambassador Wallace, speaking in the same place at today's memorial celebration, struck the same note when he declared in his address that so long as the work of world peace was delayed the work for which the American soldiers died was not complete.

American forces on the Rhine were represented at Suresnes today by a detachment of sixty men and the headquarters band. The French army sent two regiments of infantry and two batteries, which were reviewed in passing the American graves by Marshal Petain and Ambassador Wallace. The Souvenir Francaise had placed small French and American flags on each grave.

Memorial Day was celebrated at all of the American military cemeteries in France—at Romagne, at Ploisy, at Belleau Wood, at Beaumont, at Chateau Thierry, at Thiacourt, at Toul, at Fismes, at Neufchateau and a score of other burial places of "doughboys."

At Ploisy General Frank Parker and General Mangin of the French Army spoke. There are buried the men who fell in the battle in July, 1918, which marked the turning point of the war. Two American divisions, the First and Second, fought under General Mangin as commander of the Tenth French Army.

The ceremonies at Ploisy were under the direction of the American Committee for Devastated France, of which Miss Anne Morgan is the head.

General Mangin spoke of the union of France and America and cursed the hand that tried to destroy it.

"My companions in arms of July, 1918, who gave their lives for the sacred cause of defense which united all free nations," he said, "I honor you. Here are the fields which witnessed your courage, paths from which the first division sprang forward to Ploisy, where we stand now, while the second division was rushing toward Torcy. We tread the soil they reconquered from the barbarians at the cost of their lives in that magnificent assault which decided the war. It was here that victory took its flight toward the Meuse, the Moselle and the Rhine.

"Young men who went to battle as to a feast with happy smile and courage, the remembrance of your heroic sacrifice will ever be remembered by your companions. They will transmit to their children, strengthened by your blood, friendship between America and France will be an everlasting structure which time will never destroy. Cursed be the sacrilegious hand which tries to touch it. From the graveyards of immense battlefields, from the sea, from the Vosges the cry would arise, 'We are united in life, in death, in war and in peace.'"

Many French newspapers, while paying a touching tribute to the American dead, take occasion to make political remarks on Memorial Day.

The Action Française hopes that the spirit France shows on Memorial Daw will help overcome anti-French feeling in America.

Clemenceau's paper, the Homme Libre, pays an eloquent tribute to the Americans and thinks Memorial Day should restore the ties that bound the nations which fought together. Information says that, despite politics, France can feel only gratitude for America today.

The Temps remarks:

"So long as American men and women come to France to kneel at the grave of a son who, dead, has drawn a parent's tender tears; of a husband who has left a void never to be filled; of a friend who, fallen, has remained engraved on a faithful heart—so long will German efforts be powerless to loosen the alliance which has crushed them."

The Matin says:

"It would be exaggeration to say that the Americans and the Frenchmen see things always eye to eye. There are occasions when we cannot understand each other. However, there is now a tie which neither the lapse of time nor diversity of character can ever unbind."

The Journal des Debats declares, "Each one of us must do his utmost to convince our friends that France has not forgot."

PERSHING EULOGIZES HARVARD WAR DEAD

PAYS TRIBUTE TO ALLIES

Governor Coolidge Declares We Must Establish Peace Based on Justice.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 30.—General Pershing, representatives of the allied armies and Governor Coolidge joined with President Lowell and officers and members of the faculty of Harvard University today in exercises honoring the memory of the Harvard men who gave their lives in the war against Germany. At Widener Library General Pershing placed a wreath at the base of the roll of honor bearing the names of 360 Harvard dead.

In an address at Sanders Theatre, in Memorial Hall, General Pershing paid tribute to Harvard for the part it played in the war, saying that it "took the lead in placing its resources and influence at the disposal of the Government."

"Those who trained upon your campus," he added, "carried their high ideals to France and on the battlefield upheld your enviable standard of devotion and loyalty. Through their sacrifices they have given us and future generations a more lofty conception of justice and liberty."

The part that Harvard played in 1776, in 1861, and in other wars, he said, had made its name "synonymous with patriotism."

"At this moment," General Pershing continued, "we bow our heads in honor of the brave Allies whose peoples and armies bore the brunt of war for four terrible years, and whose dead, with our own, lie in consecrated ground which their courage redeemed. To the mother and the widow our hearts go out in deepest sympathy, yet we feel with them the solemn pride of having laid such a precious sacrifice upon the altar of humanity."

He mentioned especially Lieut. Col. James Andrew Shannon, at one time commander of the Harvard regiment and later a member of his personal staff, who was killed in the Argonne, terming him "a beloved friend, a gallant soldier and an ideal Christian gentleman."

Governor Coolidge in referring to the dead said:

"The object they sought was the victory of righteousness and righteous peace. If the lesson they have taught us is to be exemplified by those who come after we must establish and maintain a peace based upon justice on the part of our nation toward all other nations, and guaranteed by our power to force obedience on the part of any who may come against us, to law, according to the conscience of civilization and the edict of humanity."

President Lowell in his tribute said:

"Unselfish was the aim for which these lives were given. Let not their comrades, or those who could not join the ranks, lose the high thoughts that filled their souls."

During the exercises at Sanders Theater music was furnished by the university band and the university glee club and choir. Prayer was offered by Bishop William Lawrence of the Episcopal Diocese of Massachusetts.

General Pershing was escorted by a mounted detachment from the Harvard Field Artillery Unit and was greeted by a salute of seventeen guns from the university battery. In the procession from the library to the hall, in addition to General Pershing and officers of the university, were representatives of the city and State, representatives of the allied armies, Harvard veterans of the civil war, members of the American Legion and the Harvard Regiment.

Members of the families of the Harvard war dead occupied a special section in the centre of the theatre. The colors of the Harvard Regiment, flags of the allied nations and the Stars and Stripes were set on either side of the stage.

SHIP SENDS WIRELESS FOR POLICE AND DOCTOR

Baltimore Will Send Reserves to British Steamer—Battleship Offers Aid.

BALTIMORE, May 30.—Wireless calls from the British steamship Tregantle, inside the Chesapeake, received tonight asked for police assistance and a surgeon.

A Baltimore police boat with reserves will start down the harbor early in the morning.

PLEADS FOR UNKNOWN DEAD

Mrs. Robinson Urges Mothers Here to Leave Sons to France's Care.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., May 30.—Because there is "no place more fitting," Mrs. Charles L. F. Robinson, who last night returned from a pilgrimage to her soldier son's grave at Belleau Wood, today urged American mothers, in a Memorial Day message, not to attempt to disturb the graves of their sons who fought in France.

Mrs. Robinson, whose husband was the late President of the Colt Firearms Company, was in France six weeks, the chief purpose of her visit being to view the grave of Lieutenant Caldwell Colt Robinson of the Marines, 2d Division, who was said to have finished off four Germans with his revolver before he fell, on June 5, 1918.

Mrs. Robinson praised the fortitude of French women, most of whom are garbed in mourning, she said, and added that for her, as well, the American soldier cemeteries were consecrated by the blood of many heroes.

"To remove the known dead would be unjust discrimination against the many unknown dead, who made the supreme sacrifice and cannot be honored by name," she declared. "If the unknown dead alone were left, they would be forgotten."

At present, he said, all the American cemeteries are being wonderfully and tenderly cared for by the French Government and by American men and women assistants. Mrs. Robinson advised American mothers who contemplate visiting France to make advance reservations in Paris through the Women's Club in the Hotel Perrognat, 35 Rue de Caumartin.

ESCAPED CONVICT BACK AT PARENTS URGING

Feared to Break Mother's Heart, Said Charles Ward, Colored, in Returning to Prison.

BOSTON, May 30.—Charles Ward, a negro convict, whose escape in company with two other men from the State Prison on the night of May 25 had baffled the authorities, returned to the prison tonight as suddenly as he had disappeared and gave himself up to the Warden.

"I knew if I didn't return," he said, "I would break my mother's heart."

Ward was serving a sentence of thirty-five to forty years for criminal assault, and his companions, Herman L. Barney and Harry Manster, were serving sentences for murder. He said that he had been in this city ever since his escape and that he knew nothing of the whereabouts of Barney and Manster, from whom, he said, he separated, once they were outside the prison walls.

Ward said he decided to surrender upon the advice of his father and mother and a friend, whose identity was not disclosed, but who was said to be a clergyman. He returned to the prison in a taxicab accompanied by the "friend" and presented himself to Warden E. E. Shattuck.

BRISTOL COWED BY TROOPS.

Sunday Crowds Kept from Rubber Plant by Rhode Island Militia.

BRISTOL, R. I., May 30.—National Guard detachments, the first of which came here last Friday night by order of Governor Beeckman because of strikes, in which several persons were injured by bullets and stones, were in complete control of the town today.

They gave particular attention to preventing too close an approach by any persons to the plant of the National India Rubber Company. It was an attack by sympathizers with strikers at this plant upon a small number of employes who attempted to report for work that precipitated the disturbance.

About one-fourth of the 4,700 employes are on strike and the plant had been closed down for some time until the effort was made to reopen some departments on Friday. After the riot, the employes who had reported were sent home, but officials of the company said that the plant would be reopened as soon as possible, under military protection.

Adjt. Gen. Charles W. Abbott, Jr., is in command of the troops, which include cavalry, coast artillerymen acting as infantry, and an ambulance company. Their movements were watched with interest by the Sunday throngs on the streets, but the day passed quietly.

ALL FRANCE HONORS THE AMERICAN DEAD

right. Greater glory rests with no nation than with those nations which have borne such sons as these. We are here to render homage, but their deeds are beyond our praise. We seek rather to claim them as countrymen and to beg a share of the inspiration of their dauntless souls. We can do little to honor the men who sleep on the very field of honor, but we can, God willing, learn to profit by their example. What they did for their brothers and ours on this side of the ocean we can maintain for them, and we will.

"The world has never questioned why America entered the war, nor what her soldiers fought to achieve. It was first to put down the power of evil and then to establish lasting peace among mankind. * * * With the Allies they won the victory. It is for us to maintain the just peace they died to establish. The war was fought to make the world safe for democracy, and not for anarchy. The hideous head of anarchy, in whatever shape and wherever it may be found, must be crushed without consideration, without counting the cost.

"The twin menaces of anarchy and idleness are today the chief elements preventing the speedy restoration of the world to a normal condition. The peace we helped to win—the peace we shall maintain—is a peace of justice, law and order. So long as this is challenged, so long as this is delayed, in the West, in the East, in the North or in the South, the work the hero dead began is not completed. Be that our task now and hereafter. 'Tis they who gave us the torch of civilization as their spirits passed on high, and we must keep it bright, else neither shall we live in peace nor they sleep in peace, in the Argonne, in Picardy or on Flanders field."

Marshal Petain's Address.

The applause as the Ambassador ended was subdued, though many women wept openly, while the eyes of numerous men auditors were moist. Marshal Petain, in the undress field uniform of a General of a division, with the War Cross and the Military Medal as his only decoration, then stepped forward and said:

"To salute these graves which mark the resting place of those of your compatriots who fell on our fields in the defense of France, the Commander-in-Chief of her armies, speaking in behalf of the Government of the Republic, comes with respect. Faithful to the custom inaugurated by your great Lincoln, and which Your Excellency now observes with such fine feeling on the soil of France, we come here with you today to decorate the tombs of your heroes, fallen to protect those eternal principles which ever have been dear to their country—justice, freedom and independence.

"Those families who weep for their dead will find consolation in the thought that their dead ones sacrificed their lives in the cause of and on the soil of a land towards which their hearts were traditionally turned—in and for a nation which aided in the foundation of your Republic and which the sons of America have learned to look upon almost as their native land. Indeed, they are not resting as strangers in a strange land, these soldiers of liberty, sent overseas at a moment when the fate of the world was at stake and towards whom the heart of France turns gratefully today. These tombs will be forever watched over with the same pious care as that which our country gives her own children.

"Brothers in arms, sharers of one common glory, one common sacrifice, I salute you as heroes whose young days found here the end of their work. In acclaiming you I voice the sentiments of my whole country, victorious and forever grateful."

The Marshal spoke in a low voice which carried barely thirty feet from where he stood. When he had ended an American platoon from the Army of Occupation on the Rhine presented arms. One stalwart doughboy, weeping convulsively, had to leave the ranks and sat on a nearby tomb of an American soldier.

Ambassador Wallace and Marshal Petain, followed by the Earl of Derby, members of the American and British Embassies, representatives of Premier Millerand and attending French army officers ascended the little hill where stands the heroic-size statue of "The American Doughboy," and deposited a wreath, bearing the inscription, "From the President of the United States to the American Soldiers fallen on the Field of Honor."

A band of 600 pieces from the Republican Guard played the Marseillaise to which the 56th Infantry Band, U. S. A. replied with the "Star-Spangled Banner." This band came from Coblenz.

A representative of the French War Office laid at the foot of the statue of "The American Doughboy" a wreath from "the Ministry of War and the French people," while Colonel Sackville-West, the military attaché of the British Embassy, deposited a wreath, entwined with the British and American colors. Then both French and American buglers sounded "Taps," and the impressive ceremony ended.

As the participants in the exercises began wending their way homeward a storm broke, but this did not prevent the pollus, several thousand of them, from the 119th, the 5th, the 103d and the 89th regiments, and members of the Foreign Legion, from gathering about the statue. A little detachment of American soldiers, clad in khaki, surrounded by pollus, seemed lost in the great gathering of French soldiers. The greetings exchanged were most friendly.

"Why do you weep?" asked one of a youth standing near the statue. "Because I was not in the war," the boy replied. He belonged to the class of 1919.

Ceremony at Tomb of Lafayette.

A simple but impressive ceremony at the Tomb of Lafayette in the Picpus Cemetery this morning opened the day's observance. Colonel Francis E. Drake of the American Chamber of Commerce in Paris, laid a wreath on the tomb of the French hero of the American Revolution and made a brief address. Response was made by Colonel Count de Chambrun, descendant of Lafayette from platoon of the Fifty-first Infantry from the American Army of Occupation at Coblenz was present as a guard of honor.

The tomb was decorated with flowers and American and French flags entwined. Only a small company was present, owing to the early hour and the threatening weather.

Four little orphan girls, dressed in black, laid a great wreath of immortelles on the tomb. It bore the inscription, "In remembrance of the American soldiers, friends of the children of France."

Americans and French held a joint memorial ceremony at the Kerfautras Cemetery, where the graves of both Americans and Frenchmen were decorated with flowers and flags. Vice Consul Jordan, Deputy Billecort and Admiral Aubry delivered addresses.

GENERAL ALLEN SPEAKS AT GRAVES OF 21,000

BAR-LE-DUC, France, May 30.—Romagne Cemetery, where more than 21,000 American soldiers are buried, had American and French flags floating over each grave today when Major Gen. Henry T. Allen, Commander in Chief of the American Army of Occupation at Coblenz, and other notable personages, held services for the Americans who died in the war and rest in sight of the Argonne Forest.

American troops from Coblenz, paying honor to their fallen comrades, were encamped on the field where some of them had fought. French civil and military authorities and representatives of patriotic organizations delivered addresses, and solemn assurances were given that the graves of the allied soldiers would be cared for and decked "with flowers that grew in the fields where the blood of our veterans has flowed."

In his address Major Gen. Allen said:

"We are assembled at the graves of these fallen heroes to do homage to their memory and thus ennoble ourselves. The representatives of a vigorous nation, called to battle for the greatest cause known to mankind—the freedom of the world and the liberty of man—they nobly responded and gloriously made the supreme sacrifice. No greater honor could be mine than to be privileged humbly and reverently to participate as the representative of the Government and the army in this Memorial Day.

"This spot is highly sacred to me because it was precisely here in this village of Romagne where my battle post of command was fixed when the first American army in the great Meuse-Argonne offensive jumped off for the final decisive struggle, and where many superb Texans and Oklahomans, whose extraordinary valor and patriotism had endeared them to me, made their last advance. But praise in honor-bound credit to them must be shared by the heroic soldiers in other divisions on the front at this stage of the greatest offensive in which the forces of the United States were ever engaged.

"To discriminate between the valor and patriotism of the divisions of different States would be as ungracious as unwarrantable, for in our system of replacements many States, from Maine to California, from the Lakes to Mexico, were represented in every division at the time the spirit of these brave men were released to the hereafter.

"Let us not forget the soldiers of all our allies who fell on the field of honor for the rights of humanity and liberty. May our powerful country, faithfully supported by its allies, continue its altruistic efforts to the end that all States may mutually assist in the rehabilitation of the world from the war.

"Soldiers: To you who made the supreme sacrifice I bow in reverence and admiration. Your immortalized names are eternally recorded to the glory of your families and your country for your part in the sublimest cause in the greatest war the world has ever known. You have decorated your standards with immortal glory while we decorate your graves in humility and modesty with the flowers of love and gratitude.

"Heroes, your valor and spirit remain sacred inspirations for us for all time."

LE MANS, France, May 30.—Memorial Day was celebrated in the cemetery here. General Maurisson, Prefect of the Department of Sarthe; Senator Lebert, numerous American officers, many local notables and a throng of soldiers attended. Honors were paid by detachments of all arms. Wreaths were placed on all the graves.

Mangin with Parker at Ploisy.

PLOISY, France, May 30.—Three Marshals of France, Foch, Joffre and Petain, were represented by officers of their staffs at the memorial ceremony today over the graves of nearly 2,000 American soldiers. General Mangin, victor of the battle of the Aisne, presided at the services here. He had at his side Brig. Gen. Frank J. Parker of the Third American Army and Mme. Macheres, who was Mayor of Ploisy during the war. On top of the stone erected to commemorate the dead there floated, side by side, the Stars and Stripes and the Tricolor.

Praise for Liggett's Dead.

SEDAN, France, May 30.—Detachments of French and American soldiers acting as guards of honor for 800 American dead at Beaumont Letanne Cemetery and delegations from all parts of that region listened to the reading of an order of the day of the French Second Army Corps, telling of the offensive of Liggett's troops. The graves were literally banked with flowers. Lieutenant Colonel Ward of the American Red Cross thanked the French authorities in the name of the

WOMEN APPEAL FOR WIVES OF REDS

CHARGES OF CRUELTY MADE

American Committee Indorses Attitude of Assistant Secretary Louis F. Post.

Indorsing the policy of Louis F. Post, Assistant Secretary of Labor, toward the prisoners captured by Government agents in raids of radical headquarters, the American Woman's Committee, through its Executive Secretary, Miss Helen Todd, announced yesterday that it would send representatives to Washington to appeal again for a Congressional investigation of the Department of Justice. It offers for public use, the statement reads, a volume of data and affidavits showing the lawlessness and cruelty of the Department of Justice "to the wives and children not only of deported radicals but of alleged radicals now held in various parts of the country awaiting hearings."

Outlining the activities of the American Woman's Committee since investigating and reporting early in the year on the condition of a number of wives of deported Russians who had to be taken care of by their neighbors, the statement critics as Attorney General Palmer, Secretary Wilson, Mr. Abercrombie, Francis P. Garvin of the Department of Justice for their official attitude and continues:

"From December until April no action could be secured from the Government until Louis F. Post took his present stand."

Supplementing the statement of her committee, Miss Todd said: "The chief sufferers were not the men deported to Russia, housed and fed at Government expense, but their wives and children left to starve, for they would have starved had not their neighbors, almost as poor as themselves, taken care of them. The tales of the raids and breaking up of homes have taken the place of the old stories of Russian persecution, and, like all stories, they will be magnified by repetition. No matter what schools the children may attend, they will hear in their homes from their mothers and grandmothers how their families were forcibly separated.

"All that we ask is that the mothers and children who want to go with their husbands and fathers be permitted to do so."

Byron S. Uhl, Acting Commissioner of Immigration at Ellis Island, refused to comment on the Woman's Committee statement beyond asking: "If the children were sent to their fathers, their fathers would teach them their doctrines, wouldn't they? Where else would the children learn different ideas but at school in this country? However, that is a matter not for my department but for the Department of Justice at Washington."

FUSION TO DEFEAT SOCIALISTS URGED

National Security League Fears Radical Victory in Eight Congressional Districts Here.

Warning of the apparent certainty of the election of four Socialist Congressmen in New York City and the possibility of the election of four others unless the Democrats and Republicans resort to fusion in these districts is issued by the National Security League in a statement made public yesterday. The league, which is a non-partisan organization, suggests a demand upon the party leaders for the nomination of fusion candidates in the first four districts, the Twelfth, Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Twentieth, and serious consideration of the advisability of fusion in the four other districts, the Eighteenth, Twenty-second, Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth.

The first four districts, the statement says, were only saved from the Socialists in 1918 by fusion, and in three districts, the Twelfth, Thirteenth and Twentieth, the fusion nominees were only elected by narrow margins—less than 1,000 in the Twelfth and only a little more than 3,000 in the Thirteenth and Twentieth.

Of these four "doubtful" districts, the Fourteenth was represented by F. H. La Guardia, Republican, until his election as President of the Board of Aldermen, and the seat is now vacant. The Twelfth and Thirteenth are now represented by two Democrats, Henry M. Goldfogle and Christopher D. Sullivan, and the Twentieth by Isaac Siegel, Republican.

In the other four districts, the National Security League bases its warning upon the increased Socialist vote for Assembly candidates last year. Charles D. Orth, President of the League, stated that fusion was accomplished in 1918 largely because the United States was at war and the desirability of fusion appealed to the party leaders.

CANADIAN PAPER MILLS IN $60,000,000 MERGER

Two Big Ottawa Concerns and Several Subsidiaries Will Produce 650,000 Tons a Year.

MONTREAL, May 30.—Merger of the W. C. Edwards Company and the Gilmour & Hughson Company of Ottawa, by which paper mill properties valued at $60,000,000, are consolidated, was announced here today.

The merger will include the Riordan subsidiaries, the Kipawa Company, Ltd., and the Ticonderoga Pulp and Paper Company, together with the timber limits and 50,000 horse power of undeveloped water power, originally owned by the Bronson Company, it was stated.

The consolidated concern will have a pulp and paper output of about 650,000 tons per year.

CANADIAN PAPERS COMPLAIN

Special to The New York Times.

OTTAWA, May 30.—Representatives of twenty-seven papers published in Ontario, one-fourth of the whole number published in Canada, interviewed Sir Henry Drayton, Finance Minister, and Sir Robert Borden Saturday morning to ask that measures should be taken to prevent their suspension for lack of print paper. As a result, the Minister of Finance has asked for representatives of the Donnacona Paper Company and the Ontario Paper Company to come to Ottawa for a conference on the situation Wednesday morning. It is thought that some sort of arrangement can be come to by negotiation in this way.

Following the Supreme Court decision in the case of Price Brothers, it is stated that the Donnacona Paper Company has given notice that it cannot supply a pound of paper after July 1, because of the demands of the Hearst papers, which now ask that contracts formerly made with the Donnacona shall be fulfilled to the letter.

The Ontario Paper Company has also notified the publishers that The Chicago Tribune requires the whole output of its mill at Thorold. This mill gets most of its pulp from the Crown lands of Quebec, and it is operated under the direction of a Chicago board for The Tribune.

Among the papers represented here on Saturday were The Toronto World, Belleville Intelligencer, Lindsay Post, St. Catharines Standard, Brantford Expositor, Guelph Herald, Hamilton Times, Kitchener Telegraph, Stratford Herald, Sarnia Observer, London Free Press, London Advertiser, Chatham Planet and papers at Fort William and Port Arthur.

The Minister of Finance was informed that the difficulty of getting newsprint was one of the chief reasons why The St. Catharines Journal went out of existence. The Peterboro Review, which suspended Friday, is being taken in by The Examiner, mainly because of the difficulty of continuing with an insecure supply of paper. Some of the dailies thus threatened are the only local papers in their districts.

Workers Reject Woolen Mill Terms.

NORTH ADAMS, Mass., May 30.—Employes of the woolen and worsted mills of this city today voted not to accept the 15 per cent. increase in wages granted by the manufacturers on Friday. The workers assert that the increase will affect only a few and will mean only from 10 to 12 per cent. for others.

IRISH SITUATION GROWING CRITICAL

cation of Oliver Plunkett has been interpreted here to mean that Cardinal Logue failed to obtain all he desired.

Expect Startling Developments.

LONDON, May 30 (Associated Press).—The National News says:

"The position in Ireland, we understand, is so grave that a number of warships are now being fitted out in Sheerness for dispatch to Irish ports.

"The situation is more serious than would appear from published telegrams, and startling developments are expected in the next few days.

"In the present temper of the Sinn Feiners it is not unlikely that they will make a last effort against the forces of law and order."

QUEENSTOWN, Ireland, May 30.—The Cameron Highlanders, recently ordered for service in Ireland, disembarked here today through the streets to their hutments.

Guns and ammunition were transferred from the steamer to an Admiralty trawler, which with a number of troops proceeded for Cork.

Raids and Fires Continue.

DUBLIN, May 30.—When a majority of the inhabitants of Louth, near Dundalk, were attending church today a party of armed men entered the village and proceeded to destroy the vacant police barracks and a house used as a Petty Session Court.

Other houses caught fire and an entire row was demolished.

When the villagers came from church scouts held them up and several men were compelled to fetch a share of oil for the work of destruction. Some of the raiders were masks and all are said to be strangers to the district.

The raiders commandeered a quantity of petrol. They occupied the village for an hour.

The barracks at Gullybackey, County Antrim, and the Custom House at Castlehaven were also gutted by fire.

Only four out of fourteen jurors summoned to serve on the inquest on a policeman killed at Kilmallock have reported, and the District Inspector said: "I think the failure of the jury to appear is a most contemptible piece of cowardice. It is a terrible indication of the terrorism to which the country is reduced."

The Coroner ordered a three hours' adjournment, but only two more jurors were present.

No improvement has occurred in the Dublin dock strike, but the strikers have agreed to allow all foodstuffs at present lying in the sheds to be returned to their owners. They also gave a permit to a provision firm to remove a consignment of margarine.

SKIBBEREEN, Ireland, May 30.—A mail train from Bantry to Cork was held up at Durrus Road Station by armed men today.

The men took the mail bags and decamped in an automobile.

DUNDALK, Ireland, May 30.—Opposition to the Sunday newspapers continues.

A policeman attempted to intervene, but was disarmed.

CASTLETON, Ireland, May 30.—The Berehaven customs office was destroyed by fire this morning.

An adjoining steamship office had a narrow escape from a like fate.

BELFAST, May 30.—The Irish Trades Congress has promised its full support to the Dublin railway strikers.

This may lead to a repetition of the deadlock which occurred over the hunger strikers.

Copyright, 1920, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

DUBLIN, May 29.—Prospects of a dominion settlement of the Irish question are brighter than ever before is the considered opinion of Sir Horace Plunkett, founder of the Irish Dominion League and leader of the moderate Irish Nationalist opinion.

Sir Horace said this evening at his home in Kilteragh, near Dublin, that as each successive effort to find a settlement short of a dominion status proves unworkable the British are driven more and more toward the only acceptable scheme, which is entire national independence. He also marks the fact that leading Sinn Feiners are showing a disposition to consider the dominion plan at least as a step on the road to final independence.

"One thing is certain," said Sir Horace, "and that is that Britain cannot continue to govern Ireland by martial law. That leads nowhere. It means piling soldiers on soldiers, sending more and more, and there is not the remotest chance of breaking Irish resistance by military rule.

"Moreover, I am convinced that labor is going to play a great part in the Irish settlement. It already has demonstrated its power in securing the release from Mountjoy Prison of the hunger strikers and stopping the uncontrolled exporting of food from Ireland. From that it is only a short step to enforcing the national demands.

"I am more hopeful of an early settlement now than I have ever been. Events are working in favor of Irish aspirations."

20 DIE IN ENGLISH TORRENT.

Cloudburst Causes River Lud to Sweep Over South.

LOUTH, England, May 30.—Twenty deaths have resulted here so far from the sudden overflow of the small River Lud, running through this town, in the Lincolnshire fen country, which it attributed to a cloudburst in the woods nearby on Saturday night.

The water spread so rapidly that houses in the low lying part of the town were immediately engulfed in a rush which carried away bridges, fences, trees and other obstacles.

In many cases the weight of the water prevented the opening of doors, or otherwise many persons could have reached a place of safety. Within a short time ground floors of houses were engulfed by the torrent, which was 200 yards wide.

The water swept on its crest portions of demolished cottages, automobiles, wagons, furniture, uprooted trees and the bodies of drowned animals. Bridges crumbled before the rushing flood.

So sudden was the approach of the waters that a majority of the deaths occurred during the first moments of the flood, when the lower rooms of houses were swamped. This was particularly true in the lower parts of the town. In the higher places many persons escaped, but only after wading waist deep through the water.

Hundreds of persons are homeless and many householders have lost most of their belongings.

BURST PIPE GEYSER ROARS IN FIFTH AV.

Oberwalder's Sons, art dealers, 716 Madison Avenue, was in Central Park, near the Fifty-ninth Street entrance, when the premonitory rumble brought him into the avenue.

"I saw the sections of pavement, that you see all neatly piled up there now, flying through the air," he said. "Some of them fell as far north as Fifty-ninth Street. I never saw so many automobiles backing up so fast in my life. The dust was falling in the park within a few minutes, turning everything white.

"People were white, automobiles were white. Buildings, sidewalks—everything was white. And the air was so full of that white dust that you couldn't see anything. It was like the darkest night you can imagine—a dark night of white dust.

"I never heard a noise that could compare with the roar of the escaping steam. And for a while it seemed to grow louder, although it seemed to me it was making as much noise as it was possible to make when it began.

"I stayed near it for quite a while and saw the column from all angles. I am sure I am being most conservative when I say it reached to the top of that building [the same building of seven stories, pointed out by Mr. Ward]. The dust particles were falling as far north as Sixtieth Street.

G. A. R. Parade Just Passed.

"The parade of the Grand Army had passed only a short time when it happened. That was another lucky thing—that the parade got by before the blew-out came.

"There was one very amusing incident. A bus was half way beaween Fifty-eighth and Fifty-ninth Streets when the real blow-off came. It was crowded one second and empty the next. You never saw passengers get out of a Fifth Avenue bus so quick or in so many different ways."

Governor Smith was among those who arrived at the scene during the height of the spectacle. He pushed through the throng of curious and asked Police Sergeant Ward what the explosion was. Ward immediately recognized him. After a few moments the Governor went away.

Many residents of the hotels, apartment houses and private dwellings in a wide radius said afterward that they had thought the initial shock was that of an earthquake. From all parts of the city queries were received.

Robert E. Link, Superintendent of the New York Steam Heating Company, hurried to the scene at once with an emergency crew. The best he could do was to order the steam turned off and start his men digging to reach the seat of the difficulty. He said that he would order an investigation.

The diggers had not reached the main at midnight, and steam was still seeping up through the torn pavement, which was extremely warm for several feet about the crater.

At the Consolidated Gas Company's emergency station in West Sixty-sixth Street it was said late last night that a call had come in from the place of the accident several hours after it happened, but no report of damage or injury had been made to the station, and it was believed the gas mains had not been affected.

An emergency crew was sent from the New York Edison Company station in East Twenty-sixth Street. At midnight no report had been received from it, nor had there been any complaints of buildings in the neighborhood being in darkness, leading those in charge of the station to believe that the company's wires had not suffered.

The United Electric Light and Power Company, which also furnishes service in the district near the hotel, suffered no damage, it was said at the emergency and repair station in West 147th Street.

If "Acid-Mouth" would only let up on your teeth!

Persistency is the middle name of "Acid-Mouth." If left unchecked, it very likely in time will destroy every tooth in your mouth.

Yet mouth acids in themselves are mild enough and can be overcome. The regular use of Pebeco Tooth Paste will do much to counteract "Acid-Mouth" and keep teeth, gums, and mouth in splendid condition.

FRENCH FIX LIMITS ON KRASSIN PARLEY

Won't Enter Political Negotiations with Soviet Agent or Consider Dealings in Gold.

FOR EXCHANGE OF PRODUCTS

Krassin Remains Secluded in London Hotel, Refusing to See Press or Business Men.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 30.—The French Government has instructed M. du Halgouet, its representative on the Allied Economic Council, which will meet Krassin, the Soviet trade envoy, in London Wednesday, to make known to his colleagues as well as to Krassin, first, that the French Government will not enter upon any political negotiations of any kind with the representatives of the Moscow Government, and, second, that the French Government will agree to no trading plan which calls for the payment of Russian gold.

This step by the French Government is intended also to signify that if Lloyd George engages in any political conversations with Krassin nothing he does or says binds France.

The French Government holds that all negotiations with Krassin are to be based upon the allied decisions of last March, saying first that pourparlers between Russia and the Allies are to be of a strictly commercial character and to relate to trading through co-operatives, and second that the trading thus planned shall be by means of exchange of products and not by payment of gold.

The French point of view is that Krassin does not represent the Russian co-operatives because the co-operatives have been supressed. They contend that he represents Lenin and Trotsky, or, in other words, the Soviet Government. So long as the Allies proceed to deal with Krassin as a commercial agent, the French will not object, but they draw the line, at treating with him as a political agent.

As for the payment of the French in gold they hold first that this gold, which Krassin proposes to pay for imports, does not belong to the Soviets, who stole it, and inthe second place they hold that the creditors of Russia, of whom France is the chief, have a lien upon this gold for their credits, and therefore that the sending of it out of Russia for other purposes jeopardizes their rights.

When Krassin made the arrangement by which 20,000,000 francs in gold were to be paid to Swedish merchants for exports to Russia, France protested to the Swedish Government. Krassin then made the point that the gold belonged not to the Soviet Government but to the co-operatives. The French reply was to quote the Soviet manifesto abolishing the co-operatives and the taking over of their functions by the Soviet Government.

LONDON, May 30.—Gregory Krassin, the Russian Soviet Minister for Trade and Commerce, and his fellow commissioners now in London have remained men of mystery thus far. They are secluded in a quiet hotel frequented chiefly by business men from the provinces, and in accordance with the conditions arranged previous to their coming they are refusing to see newspaper men or even representatives of the business world who wish information or desire to present plans for trade with Russia.

The London newspapers which are against any negotiations with the Soviet Government are continuing to protest against the admission of Krassin and his collaborators and against the proposal for a meeting between them and Premier Lloyd George and Lord Curzon, the Foreign Secretary. These newspapers are making a great deal of the prediction recently made by the Rev. H. W. North, Chaplain of the English Church in Moscow, who on his return from Russia declared that the Soviet Government would fall within six months if the blockade were maintained.

TRAPS A PARK ROMEO.

Mary Cooney Strolls with Him to the Station and Gathers Him In.

"Never again," exclaimed a young man who said he was Henry S. Hillers of 59 West Sixty-second Street, in the West Side Court yesterday, after paying a fine of $10 imposed by Magistrate Levine on a complaint of disorderly conduct made by Mary Cooney of Deputy Police Commissioner Ellen O'Grady's staff.

Miss Cooney was watching for "masqueraders" by order of Commissioner O'Grady, following the receipt of many complaints that young women could no longer walk across Central Park in the late evening hours without danger of being annoyed. Entering the Park at Fifty-ninth Street and Fifth Avenue, according to her story, Miss Cooney passed Hillers, seated on a bench. He followed her to the region of the reservoir, at Seventy-ninth Street, according to Miss Cooney, several times whistling and speaking to her, and finally took her arm, saying, "I'm lonesome."

"Then come along," said Miss Cooney, and together the two walked south until they were near the Arsenal Police Station.

Miss Cooney, producing a shield, then said: "We have arrived at home. Just use the steps between the two green lights."

Mrs. Isabella Allen, 311 Eighth Avenue, a Major in the Women's Police Reserves of the West Twentieth Street Station, last night soundly cuffed and arrested a man who described himself as Samuel Richman, a waiter, 192 Henry Street. Mrs. Allen told the police he persisted in annoying her in a motion picture theatre at 308 Eighth Avenue. He was locked up on a charge of disorderly conduct.

HUNGARIAN JEWS PROTEST.

Ask Budapest Government to Prevent Further Massacres.

Delegates numbering 700, and representing upwards of 75,000 Hungarian Jews in and around New York City, gathered at the first annual convention of the Federation of Hungarian Jews in America at Yorkville Casino yesterday. After hearing a report on the massacre of Jews in Hungary from J. S. Block, a former member of the Austrian Parliament, a resolution of protest to the Government of Hungary was passed. Copies of the resolution will be sent to Washington, and to the allied powers.

At the close of the afternoon session $8,000 was raised to relieve suffering among the Jews at Budapest and elsewhere in Hungary. A third of that sum was contributed by Louis S. Bruenn, Superintendent of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

At today's session, which ends the convention, officers will be elected. The Rev. M. Tannenbaum will speak on "Conditions of Hungarian Jews in America."

AUTO KILLS HER IN CALVARY.

Woman Struck as She Is Leaving Cemetery.

In the presence of hundreds of persons placing flowers on the graves of their dead Mrs. Lucy Panzasello of 241 Sutphin Road, Jamaica, was struck by an automobile in Calvary Cemetery yesterday afternoon and so badly injured that she died last night in St. John's Hospital, Long Island City. The accident occurred when the driver of the machine tried to avoid hitting Caroline Tass, 487 Canal Street, who, however, was slightly hurt.

Mrs. Panzasello, with her daughter Rose, 15, had gone to the cemetery to decorate the grave of a relative. She was struck as she was leaving. Vincent Calcagnolo, 347 East 116th Street, Manhattan, driver of the automobile, was arrested.

'SIDEWIPE' WRECK HURTS 17 ON ERIE

CAUSED BY BLOCKED FROG

Piece of Hose Keeps Switch Open, and Susquehanna Train Scrapes Side of Erie Car.

A passenger train on the Erie Railroad, New York and New Jersey Branch, pulled out of the Jersey terminal at 10.30 yesterday morning and had got as far as Grove Street when it was sidewiped by the engine of a westbound Susquehanna Railroad train which jumped a switch.

Both trains were proceeding slowly, and though the passengers in the car struck by the locomotive were shaken badly and seventeen of them got minor injuries, none was badly hurt. The engine overturned and Daniel Leyden, the engineer, of Cresskill, N.Y., was pinned beneath it. He was scalded and hurt so badly he is not expected to live. He is in St. Francis' Hospital.

A piece of metal-wrapped coupling hose which was caught in the switch frog caused the accident. It is believed to have fallen, unnoticed from some train. When the switch was thrown the hose prevented its closing. The car of the Erie train which was struck was crowded with persons standing in the aisles. The blow canted it at a dizzy angle on the trucks and thus it slid along for some 200 feet before the train was stopped. Windows were shattered and oil from the overhead lamps spattered on the passengers. One or two women fainted, and others nearly were hysterical.

James Silver, fireman of the Susquehanna train, was injured about the head, but he went home from the hospital. Others hurt were: Evelyn Clampett, 156 Teaneck Street, Brooklyn, cut about the face and head; S. G. Banks, 1,437 Forty-ninth Street, Brooklyn, cut about the head; B. F. Miller, 953 Elizabeth Street, Elizabeth, N. J., cut by flying glass; A. M. Miller, same address, cut and bruised; Mrs. Lageffo, 313 Bowery, Manhattan, cut by splinters.

Several ambulances were summoned when the two trains were halted. They treated a number of persons at the scene and removed a few others to hospitals, where it was found they were not hurt badly enough to be detained.

A passing train bound for the terminal was halted and most of the passengers returned to the station to board other trains. J. J. O'Connell of 249 East 201st Street, reported that when he got back to the terminal he found two men in the station master's office tearing up strips of old cloth for bandages, and complained that though his wife was unnerved and needed attention, he could discover no provisions whatever for first aid.

HUGE PLATINUM THEFTS CHARGED TO CHEMIST

Tip from District Attorney Swann Leads to Arrest of Employe of Nashville Powder Mill.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 30.—H. B. Crone, chief chemist at the Old Hickory powder plant here, was arrested tonight on a warrant sworn out by United States Attorney Lee Douglass in connection with thefts of platinum from the plant which officials say may run into hundreds of thousands of dollars. Crone refused to discuss the charges against him.

District Attorney Swann of New York City sent to Douglass letters from "Joe" Weilen, a prisoner in the Tombs, to his wife which were intercepted by the officials. The letters are said to have directed Mrs. Weilen to come to Nashville and get $20,000 worth of "stuff" from Crone to cover the bail of Weilen's fellow prisoner, Robert Brown, alias Carter, alias Brooks, who, officials said, was once Crone's assistant.

Brown, according to District Attorney Swann, was arrested recently while trying to sell platinum in a New York pawnshop, and when his room was searched $30,000 worth of the metal was found hidden in two hot water bottles. Government agents are said to have traced the platinum to the Old Hickory mill.

Crone's home is in Cleveland. He has been chief chemist at the powder plant since April, 1918, and was in charge of about $1,800,000 worth of platinum.

OPEN BROOKLYN HOSPITAL.

Parade Precedes Dedication of New Brownsville Institution.

The new Brownsville and East New York Hospital, located at East Ninety-eighth Street and Rockaway Parkway, Brooklyn, was dedicated yesterday afternoon, and the first patients will be received in a few days. The hospital building cost $275,000, and its equipment is valued at $50,000.

The speeches at the hospital grounds were preceded by a parade through Brownsville, in which several thousand friends of the hospital society marched. Rabbi Herbert Levinthal, head of the new Jewish centre; Bird S. Coler, Commissioner of Public Welfare; Supreme Court Justices Edward Lazansky and Mitchell May, District Attorney Harry Lewis, and Judge J. Grattan MacMahon spoke.

During the exercises a gilded wooden key three feet long, designed to symbolize the opening of the hospital, was purchased by Herman Triebitz for $1,500.

Held on Kidnapping Charge.

Louis Deana, a widower, 30 years old, of 101 Jackson Street, Brooklyn, who is charged with kidnapping Miss Lena Sorge of 110 Skillman Avenue, last Wednesday, while she was on her way to work, was held in bail of $1,000 yesterday by Magistrate Short in the Bridge Plaza Court, Brooklyn. Desna was arrested when he was about to board a vessel bound for Italy. Miss Sorge was kidnapped by five men in an automobile.

Youth Drowns Aiding Girl.

Alex Weinstein, 19 years old, an employe of the S. D. M. Company, 121 East Twenty-fourth Street, was drowned late yesterday a short distance off Hunter's Island while attempting to rescue Cora Shain of 114 East First Street. Miss Shain, who while in swimming had become exhausted and cried for help, was rescued by Morris Wheat of 2,055 Davison Avenue, the Bronx. Weinstein's body was not recovered.

Falls from Pershing Square Viaduct.

A youth who identified himself as Charles O'Brien, 19 years old, of Savannah, Georgia, and said he was a student, fractured his skull yesterday morning in a fall from the Pershing Square viaduct to the Forty-second Street sidewalk. Patrolman Groner found the man and had him taken to Flower Hospital.

cades which block the bridges leading from Fiume to Sussak and, tearing down the barriers, bore them to the public square and burned them. According to reports, part of the regulars went over from Sussak and joined in the demonstration. It was later that d'Annunzio decided to go and fight the Jugoslavs.

Yesterday the Jugoslav Government notified the Italian Government as well as the Allies that it would resist with force any further efforts of the Italian poet.

The Matin says editorially:

"Whatever the origin of this business, it is certain that Belgrade cannot view it lightly. The Jugoslav Government declares that its soldiers will fight against further efforts of D'Annunzio, and we presume they would be able to take Fiume.

"The state of mind of D'Annunzio can easily lead to new excesses. We learn that the poet looks with a fishy eye upon the negotiations between Minister Scialoia and Minister Trumbitch.

"Nitti finds himself in an embarrassing situation. To disavow D'Annunzio and let him succumb is an act which Italian public opinion would not well receive. To aid D'Annunzio would be a grave step. It would well involve Italy in war with Jugoslavia to sustain his crew, which the Italian Government has twenty times disowned. In the one case bad internal difficulties would be faced; in the other case bad external difficulties. If the conflict gets worse the arbitrament of other powers will become an absolute necessity."

Calls for Allied Demonstration.

The Journal des Debats takes an alarming view of the situation. The mad escapade of D'Annunzio and the French and Italian Nationalists are on the point of throwing Europe into a new crisis of incalculable consequences," it says. After reviewing the political situation in Italy, which has excited the Italian Nationalists against the Jugoslavs, the Journal continues:

"That such things can come to pass in the year 1920 in defiance of the peace conference seems unbelievable. The responsibility falls in large part upon the Allies, who have allowed the formation of a hornet's nest in the Adriatic.

"Last Spring, following incidents which cost the lives of a number of French soldiers, a commission composed of four Generals, of whom one was Italian, prepared a report recommending the dissolution of the National Council of Fiume and the occupation of the city by allied troops. The Fiumians would have been glad if this step had been taken, but the Allies put the Generals' report in a pigeonhole and d'Annunzio occupied Fiume.

"D'Annunzio seeks a conflict in order to find a way out of his position. This conflict must be prevented at all costs. There must be an interallied demonstration."

Deny d'Annunzio Will Seize Sussak.

ROME, May 30.—D'Annunzio has no intention of occupying Sussak, according to a Fiume dispatch to the Messaggero.

BELGRADE, May 29.—In closing the debate in the National Assembly today, Premier Vesnitch explained that the reason why nothing had been said regarding the Adriatic question was that the Government wanted to avoid a discussion which might render its position difficult.

Regarding the western frontier, he said there was great difficulty in the questions to solve with Italy, and "a state of friendly, normal and neighborly relations between us and Italy is only possible if there is the least cause for friction. The best solution would be for the Adriatic Sea to become the frontier of our young State and Italy."

The Premier concluded with an appeal to settle the relations and differences with Italy in such a way as to leave as few scars as possible on the national body.

FLEE ERIE COUNTY JAIL.

Two Men Hold Up Guard with Revolver and Take His Keys.

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 30.—William Marweg, alleged murderer, and Joseph Brady, charged with larceny, escaped from the Erie County Jail early this morning after holding up a keeper at the point of a revolver and taking his keys.

Marweg was convicted of first degree murder several months ago, but the conviction was reversed and he was brought here to await a second trial.

Brady was charged with violating the Federal law against interstate transportation of stolen automobiles. He is said to be wanted in Newark, N. J., for alleged theft of $10,000 worth of gold leaf and also as a witness in a police investigation there.

RACE CONFERENCE MEETS IN ATLANTA

STOREY CITES H. W. GRADY

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., May 30.—The eleventh annual conference of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People began its session at Bethel A. M. E. Church today in the presence of leading members of both races. The first of the four days' conference meetings sounded the keynote and purpose of the conference, free and frank discussion for race betterment by leaders of both white and black. When the convention was opened there were 3,000 persons present, of whom 500 were delegates sent from forty-three States.

President Moorfield Storey was unable to attend, because of illness, and Arthur B. Spingarn, late Captain A. E. F., who is a New York lawyer and one of the Vice Presidents of the association, presided. Governor Hugh Dorsey was absent, being called from the city, it was announced. The speakers included Mayor James L. Key, the Rev. M. Ashby Jones, a leading Baptist minister of Atlanta, and James Weldon Johnson, a negro field secretary of the national organization.

Mayor Key told the audience that he had joined in the invitation to the association to hold its meetings in Atlanta because he wanted the country to know "that this is a broad-gauged, broad-minded city, willing to try to solve its problems through the co-operation of the races." He pointed out the fact that it was up to the members of the convention themselves to make their meeting in the South this year a success.

Mr. Spingarn read to the convention an address which was prepared by Mr. Storey, in which Mr. Storey had cited the statements of such well-known men as the late Henry W. Grady and other Atlantans, all of whom, he said, "have pleaded for justice for the negroes."

"The problem of the South," Mr. Storey's letter quoted from Mr. Grady, "is to carry on within her body politic two separate races, equal in civil and political rights and nearly equal in numbers. She must carry these races in peace, for discord means ruin. She must carry them separately, for assimilation means debasement. She must carry them in equal justice, for to this she is pledged in honor and in gratitude. She must carry them even to the end, for in human probability she never will be quit of either."

"When this doctrine is recognized and applied throughout this country," continued Mr. Storey's own statement, "the work of this association will have been done. We ask for what Grady asked, no more or no less. Religion, law, self-interest and chivalry forbid the excuse of strength to keep weaker and poorer neighbors down anywhere, and I plead to expel the prejudice from which the white and black races are suffering.

Storey Cites World Unrest.

"England and France feel themselves deserted by us since we repudiate the treaties on which they relied. Germany holds us responsible for her overthrow. We certainly cannot rely on Russia. And can we afford to cultivate just discontent in our midst? These twelve million men ust seek friends elsewhere if the governments under which they live and the men among whom they dwell deny them justice and safety."

The Rev. Dr. Jones also spoke for the South in greeting the delegates.

"I welcome the Northern people in the solution of problems to be discussed here," he declared. "For they are problems of a national nature and not merely Southern."

Dr. Jones summoned the negroes, "as part of the democracy of the United States," to take up their full share of the work of improving the relations between the races. "Together we will work out the redemption of the races," he concluded.

As Field Secretary for the association, J. W. Johnson discussed at length the problems of his own race. He said in part:

"Figures gathered by Tuskegee, by a leading Chicago newspaper and by the association, show that assault is not the chief cause of lynching negroes, though it is the commonly accepted version. Of 1,985 negroes lynched in the Southern States in the period from 1883 to 1903, this cause was assigned in 675 cases. In 1,310 cases other causes were assigned. In all States from 1889 to 1918, or thirty years, the number lynched was 2,472, of which 523 were for alleged assault. In the last thirty years fifty negro women were lynched."

Asks South to Aid Anti-Lynching Bill.

The speaker made a plea to the South for the passage of the Dyar anti-lynching bill, now before Congress. He said the five principal demands of his race before the association itself were as follows:

"Guaranty of safety of life by the abolition of lynching; demand for equal educational and industrial opportunities; demand for the ballot under the same qualifications as other races; abolition of segregation, and the abolishment of the 'Jim Crow' cars."

Sermons on the conference were preached by its negro members at service in eleven local churches of their race. Tomorrow's events include business session, round table conferences and an evening meeting devoted to labor and migration.

Eugene R. Black, President of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce; Florence Kelley, Secretary of the National Consumers League, and Dr. Plato Durham of Emory University will speak at this meeting, and Harry E. Davis of Cleveland will preside.

$5,000 MT. VERNON ROBBERY

Girl Thief Believed at Work in Westchester County.

MT. VERNON, May 30.—It became known today that a daylight thief, believed to be a young woman, has been robbing houses in Westchester County during the last two weeks. The latest robbery occurred yesterday afternoon, when the thief forced the kitchen door of the home of Charles A. Newell at 362 Edgemont Avenue and stole diamonds and other jewelry belonging to Mrs. Newell, valued at $5,000.

Mr. Newell, who is Assistant Secretary of the Metallograph Corporation of Manhattan, and his wife were away from home. The jewelry stolen was made up of a diamond studded lavalliere, six diamond rings, several watches, pearl necklace, diamond brooches and ear-rings.

A finger expert examined the impressions.

REVOLTERS CAPTURE JEWISH CONGRESS

DISORDER MARKS SESSIONS

Dr. Wise Helps Judge Mack Control as First Objectors Are Put Out by Legion Men.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 30. — The American Jewish Congress, established in this city two years ago for war purposes, disbanded at 11 o'clock tonight, and a new and permanent Jewish American congress was formed immediately. That action followed a day and night session of the temporary body which had been marked by tumultuous scenes such as seldom have been witnessed at public meetings in Philadelphia.

meetings in Philadelphia.

The delegates finished their business at an early hour this morning. After a few hours' rest they again will meet tomorrow. The session today lasted approximately twelve hours, without any recess, not even for dinner, and during all that time the excitement was at top pitch.

Twice the congress was rent by dissensions to such an extent that the proceedings threatened to end abruptly. The tumult reached its height at the afternoon session. But tonight feeling again ran high, and the Chairman once more had to threaten to have the room cleared from disturbers.

The fight centred around an attack made by Benjamin Zuckerman of New York upon the members of the delegation who had represented the congress at the Peace Conference in Paris. Following the reading of a long report by Louis Marshall of New York, who headed the delegation, Mr. Zuckerman, speaking in Yiddish, said that the delegation had "betrayed the Jewish race and misrepresented the congress."

A heated controversy ensued, at least 100 delegates rising to shout their disapproval of his statement. All efforts by Judge Mack, who also was a member of the peace delegation, to restore order were of no avail.

After an hour's stormy debate some one proposed that Judge Mack make a defense for the delegation. Then a motion was made that Mr. Zuckerman's "scandalous charges" be expunged from the records of the congress. The motion was carried by acclamation, and later th econgress in its original form was dissolved.

It was following the close of the evening's business that the Rev. Dr. Stephen S. Wise made an address, urging the establishment of the permanent congress, which action was ultimately taken.

A number of soldiers of the Jewish Legion were called on to keep order throughout the opening session this second American Jewish congress this afternoon in the ballroom of the Bellevue Stratford. Four hundred delegates attended, several of whom were ejected from the hall half an hour after the meeting began.

Judge Julian W. Mack of Chicago, President of the Congress, threatened at one time to resign on "a point of honor." Fifteen minutes later the Rev. Dr. Stephen S. Wise of New York, one of the Vice Presidents, wielding the gavel after an appeal had been taken from a ruling by the Chair, threatened to "adjourn the session and disband the congress for all time" unless order were restored immediately.

Dr. Wise, by a supreme effort succeeded in subduing the meeting, but a condition approaching quiet was not established until after more than twenty uniformed soldiers of the Jewish Legion of the British Army, who fought in Palestine, had struggled with about fifty delegates who refused to resume their seats and had ejected nearly a dozen men.

The session was opened at 3.10 o'clock with every promise that the proceedings would be pleasant and peaceful. Dr. Louis S. Rubinsehn of this city made a brief address of welcome. Then Judge Mack took the chair and delivered the opening speech. Next came Nathan Straus of New York, Honorary President of the Congress, and the witty remarks of the veteran philanthropist seemed to put the delegates in a good humor.

Five minutes later, however, the scene was transformed. The trouble started when Judge Mack announced that Louis Marshall of New York, First Vice President of the congress, who headed the Jewish delegation to the Peace Conference in Paris, would read his report.

At this point Judge Gustave Hartman of New York, Grand Master of the Independent Order of B'rith Abraham, jumped to his feet with a point of order. It was the first in a series of at least a hundred "points of order," "requests for information" and "questions of privilege" that were made in the ensuing two hours.

Hartman Urges Permanent Plan.

Judge Hartman went to the platform and introduced a resolution calling upon the congress to constitute itself a permanent body, in view of "the existing emergency in Jewish life throughout the world."

The meeting automatically divided itself into two fiercely antagonistic groups when Judge Mack ruled the resolution out of order.

Judge Mack gave two reasons for his action. The first, he said, was technical. It was that the resolution could not be introduced at the time in violation of the agenda of the congress, which called for the peace delegation report. The second, he said, was one of principle. It was that the resolution violated the organic principles upon which the congress had been founded a year ago in Philadelphia. Those principles, asserted the Judge, included one to the effect that the congress should be temporary only.

Judge Hartman's resolution was as follows:

"Whereas, an emergency exists in Jewish life throughout the world demanding and requiring the existence and maintenance of a permanent American Jewish Congress, be it, therefore,

"Resolved, That this congress, in regular session assembled, does hereby declare itself unalterably and unequivocally in favor of the existence and maintenance of a permanent American Jewish Congress, and that before this congress do adjourn proper steps be taken to effectuate the intents and purposes of this resolution."

The basic principle referred to by Judge Mack was read later by him from a booklet setting forth the principles of the congress. The paragraph is as follows:

"No resolution shall be introduced, considered or acted upon at the congress which shall in any way purport or tend to commit the congress as a body * * * to the adoption recognition or indorsement of any general theory or philosophy of Jewish life, or any theoretical principle of its racial, political, economic or religious character, or which shall involve the perpetuation of such a congress."

Judge Hartman appealed from the ruling of the Chair. Dr. Wise immediately took the place of Judge Mack and gave the floor to Judge Hartman, who made an impassioned plea for the adoption of his resolution.

Dr. Wise then called upon Judge Mack to defend his stand. The Judge reiterated his objections, adding that the adoption of the resolution would mean his immediate resignation. Dr. Wise then made an effort to put the question as to whether Judge Mack's ruling should be sustained or not to a vote, but it was impossible. Groups of delegates jumped to their feet in various corners of the room.

Dr. Wise and Soldiers Aid.

Finally Dr. Wise shouted:

"You will sit down and come to order, or I will adjourn this session and abandon the congress for all time."

Then the Jewish veterans of the Palestine campaign jumped into the breach. The soldiers rushed to the delegates who refused to stop shouting or to sit down and pushed them into their seats. Their persuasion was effective with all of them except a dozen, who fought the soldiers. These were carried bodily out of the hall.

Dr. Wise then put the question to a vote, and, to the surprise of many, Judge Mack was sustained, 142 votes against 66. The temper of the meeting also reversed itself, becoming again pleasant and peaceful. As if by common impulse, the assembly broke forth into the singing of "Hatikwah," the national anthem of Palestine.

It was 5:10 o'clock when Mr. Marshall came forward and, amid silence, read his report, as he had been called on to do two hours before, and the congress proceeded with its appointed program.

ZIONISTS THANK COUNCIL.

Express Gratitude for Balfour Declaration in Turkish Treaty.

LONDON, May 30.—The twenty-first conference of the English Zionist Federation of London today passed a resolution "expressing gratitude to the Supreme Council for incorporating the Balfour declaration in the treaty with Turkey and for granting the mandate for Palestine to Great Britain."

"It puts on record," the resolution continues, "deep appreciation of the illustrious services to the Jewish nation of the statesmen and peoples of the allied and associated powers who have collaborated in this memorable achievement, and it pledges itself that the Zionists of England will spare no effort and no sacrifice to reconstitute Palestine as the Jewish national home."

needs Germany as a purchaser of its raw materials, and as a bulwark against the East, the Bolshevist advance toward Persia is as painful for England as is the flaring up of Islamatic fanaticism. A new power is rising in the East whose possibilities we cannot yet foresee, but from it there emanates the threat which will force the Entente to reckon with us again."

How far these wild ideas are shared in other responsible circles it is impossible to say, but they are finding daily expression in the military and reactionary organs.

Mueller Declares Against Revenge.

BERLIN, May 30 (Associated Press).—Speaking at a somewhat stormy meeting in Munich on Saturday, Chancellor Mueller declared to a cheering crowd that on June 6, the day of the German Presidential election, it would be Germany's business to attest the fact "that she has had enough of war for all eternity, and that no fool, crowned or uncrowned, shall drag Germany into a war of revenge," according to a report of his address in the Tageblatt today.

"Foreigners," continued Dr. Mueller, "have told me they could not believe it possible that the frame of mind of the German people could be changed in so short a time, but after the Kapp coup even the Entente military officers admitted to me their conviction that we had become truly democratic."

The Chancellor referred to the coming conference at Spa as the first ray of hope which Germany could entertain that the extremists realize the impossibility of keeping Germany down economically and politically, and at the same time demanding extreme amounts in reparation. He said he could understand France's "rancor," and remarked that undoubtedly Prussian militarism had sinned grievously. Then he rebuked the parties of the Right, "who childishly imagine that things will change back to what they were."

When the Chancellor said he did not believe a coalition government to be an ideal one, but that he would not countenance hand grenades as a political argument, a group of Independent Socialists broke out with a storm of interruptions, but general applause greeted his declaration that a minority could not be permitted to impose a dictatorship.

"Germany," declared the Chancellor, "can live only as a republic. * * * If we obtain anything at all at Spa it will be only if the election shall justify faith in the peaceful inclinations of the German people."

The publication of alarming predictions in relation to political developments is being continued by the Majority Socialist paper Vorwärts. It declares that trouble is threatened from reactionary quarters and alleges that a large number of boxes purporting to contain machinery, but which in reality held machine guns, had been sent to farms and estates in East Prussia. The estate belonging to one of the leaders of the Pomeranian Farm Union, it asserts, has been equipped as a fortress.

The Socialist newspaper at Frankfort-on-the-Oder, Der Volksfreund, states that it has reliable military information that a revolt has been planned for June 5 or 6 in order to upset the elections.

Tells of Plans for Militarist Revolt.

A newspaper of Frankfort-on-the-Oder learns that the military party there is organizing an Anti-Republican coup for June 5 or 6, when it is intended to prevent the elections. The action has been carefully prepared, according to the paper, and will be carried out under the leadership of four Generals. Twenty-three hundred officers in the uniforms of private soldiers have been fully equipped, it says, as a Frankfort assault detachment.

The capture of Merlin will be conducted from Pomerania, with Greifswald as the base of operations, the paper adds, and it is hoped to prevent a repetition of the general strike by arresting the most important labor leaders. Hanover will be the centre for the coup in Central Germany.

Fat or Lean?
It's Up To You

For Lunch A Bottle of Sheffield Milk and a Box of Crackers. It's plenty.

ONE of the most impressive lessons of the Milk Exposition last week was the practical demonstration of the effect of milk diet. Of course, the subjects were four legged babies.

But milk is milk, when considered as food, to two legged animals as well as four legged varieties.

Of the animals exhibited those raised on milk grew twice as fast as those from whose diet milk had been eliminated. The same rule applies to human beings. The intelligent use of milk will make you weigh just what you want to. Try it.

Don't gulp your milk. Drink it slowly. ENJOY IT. Don't add it to an already ample diet. Adjust your ration to it. The warm weather is here and this is just the time to begin.

Transmits the power without the shock

The strain on the universal joint is intensified with every irregularity of the road

MUD holes—sharp turns—steep hills—worn-out roads—all test the universal joint. At every irregularity in the road the universal joint must adapt itself to abrupt changes in the angle of the drive shaft. Constantly twisted—constantly wrenched—the universal joint must still transmit a smooth, even flow of power to the rear axle.

Metal joints wear loose under this severe strain. They transmit road shocks and engine shocks, which rack the bearings, differential and transmission. The more the metal joint becomes worn the harder is the strain.

Cushioning the shocks and strains

To save your car this severe wear and tear, the Thermoid-Hardy Universal Joint has been designed. Built of flexible fabric discs, it absorbs the blows that rack the gears and bearings. The Thermoid-Hardy Joint transmits the power without the shock.

Having no metal-to-metal wearing surfaces the Thermoid-Hardy Joint cannot wear loose. It requires no lubrication—no constant attention.

Fanwise construction for strength

The patented fanwise construction of the flexible fabric discs gives the Thermoid-Hardy Universal Joint its extraordinary strength. This unique construction, illustrated below, is the only way in which uniform strength and elasticity can be obtained.

Adopted by leading manufacturers

On more than fifty cars, trucks and tractors—the Thermoid-Hardy Universal Joint is being installed as standard equipment. It has stood severe tests for endurance—in many cars running 60,000 miles without replacement or adjustment of any kind.

When you ride in a car equipped with Thermoid-Hardy Universal Joints—notice the absence of backlash, jerks and rattles that are so common with worn-out metal joints. Observe how smoothly the car starts—how much more quietly it runs, even over rough roads.

Send for our new book, "Universal Joints—Their Use and Misuse." It will give you in detail the construction of the Thermoid-Hardy Joint, records of performance, opinions of leading engineers and manufacturers who have adopted it.

In building up the flexible fabric discs, the several layers of fabric are put together so that the strands in each piece run in a different direction. This patented fanwise construction provides the greatest tensile strength. In a laboratory test made recently at Purdue University, the drive shaft itself was twisted at a total stress of 21,700 inch pounds without injury to the universal joint.

THE HOUSE OF MISREPRESENTATIVES.

There ought to be some direct and sharp way of letting the House know what the country thinks of it for its performance in passing the bonus bill on Saturday. For combined recklessness and insincerity the like has seldom been seen. With only a farcical pretense of debate, and against the protest and vote of the weightiest members, the House rushed into what was plainly nothing but a bid for the soldier vote. And it was a sham bid at that. The universal expectation is that the Senate will either reject the measure or hold it up indefinitely. If it ever goes to the President in its present form he would surely veto it amid the applause of the people. In fact, the very Representatives who fell over one another to vote for the bill would be struck with horror if it were to become a law. Ex-President ELIOT has called the whole bonus proposal "immoral." But no aspect of its immorality is more startling or repulsive than the indecent haste of the House in getting down into the dirt for the sake of a supposed political advantage.

The action was not the less to be condemned because it was confessed to be futile. Representatives almost openly avowed the belief, or expressed the hope, that the Senate would refuse to go on with the mischievous scheme. This is called "passing the buck," but in such transactions there is always something that cannot be passed on. If a man has been false to the duty laid upon him, he cannot excuse himself on the plea that others prevented the full consequences of his folly. The truth is that the House showed itself incredibly recreant, and nothing that the Senate can do will remove that reproach. And unless we are much mistaken, the cowed and insincere Representatives who voted as they did will be made to feel the national displeasure.

FAIR PLAY FOR A CANDIDATE.

Fair play is always in order and a duty even in a primary campaign. Whatever General LEONARD WOOD's qualifications for the Republican nomination for President are, the truth should be told concerning his career by opponents and critics. In an article upon General WOOD in The Nation, OSWALD GARRISON VILLARD seeks to prove that the General was not on the field of San Juan. He quotes Major Gen. JAMES H. WILSON as saying to THEODORE ROOSEVELT at Sagamore Hill: "In the Spanish war he [WOOD] was "never in but one battle, and that at "Las Guasimas, where, but for his "rescue and support by the colored "troops, he would have been badly "handled." "Oh, yes," returned Mr. ROOSEVELT, "he was at San Juan." General WILSON insisted that he was in the rear looking for ammunition. "Yes," concluded Mr. ROOSEVELT, according to General WILSON, "but do not tell anybody." General WILSON, however, told the story at a hearing of the Senate Military Affairs Committee on Dec. 3, 1903, and Mr. ROOSEVELT, who was then President, "elected General WILSON to the Ananias Club."

If General WOOD was not on the field at San Juan, Lieutenant EDWARD D. ANDERSON, commanding Troop C, Tenth Cavalry, could not have been familiar with the General's appearance, which was always striking. In a report to the Adjutant of the Tenth Cavalry, which is accessible to both General WILSON and Mr. VILLARD, Lieutenant ANDERSON, after relating that his troop about 10:30 A. M.—the battle began at 6:30—was ordered into the river bottom while under fire until it could deploy, said:

"While here a shell burst over the troop and I was struck by a small fragment in the left side above the point of the hip and received a slight flesh wound. My troop cut the wire fence to the right of the creek and deployed into the woods in rear of the front line of the regiment, and lay under cover in support on the right of the Second Squadron until the command to advance was given. While advancing and near the road, Colonel Wood, the brigade commander, came by and told me to move my troop to the right and toward the blockhouse. I had one man killed and seven wounded in reaching the top of the hill.

There is another witness to the presence of General WOOD on the field of San Juan, Lieut. Col. CHARLES D. VIELE, who commanded the First United States Cavalry (regulars). He said in a report to the Assistant Adjutant General of the Second Brigade, Cavalry Division, that some time after 10 o'clock on the morning of July 1, after crossing the Aguadores River with his regiment, he learned "that the whole ground in my front "was occupied, and so reported to the "brigade commander, Colonel WOOD, "but was ordered to continue the "movement." Colonel VIELE must have known WOOD by sight.

As to the statement of General WILSON, who did not take part in the Santiago campaign, that Colonel WOOD would have been "badly handled" at Guasimas "but for his rescue and support by the colored troops," it is true that Colonel WOOD says in his report of June 25, 1898, to Brig. Gen. S. B. M. YOUNG, that about thirty minutes after the firing had ceased and after the Rough Riders on the left had driven the Spaniards from their last position, "three troops of "the Ninth United States Cavalry, "under Captain DIMMICK, reported "to me, and I advanced them, forming a heavy line of outposts, covering our entire front, at a distance "of about 800 yards from our line." This was not a rescue. In his report of the Guasimas skirmish General JOSEPH WHEELER says: "The magnificent and brave work done by the "regiment under the lead of Colonel "Wood testifies to his courage and "skill."

BELATED MR. GOMPERS.

Mr. SAMUEL GOMPERS has given a long, distinguished and, on the whole, fruitful and useful service to the American labor union movement; but it has moved faster than he and is leaving him behind. He seems to live in the past. He utters the old easy phrases about "justice," "freedom," "democracy," as if an injury and a wrong to the general public could be just; as if freedom meant freedom to commit that injury and wrong; as if democracy were government by labor leaders. He clings to the strike, once an effective and a necessary remedy, now become a disease. He misunderstands the temper of the majority of the members of labor organizations. He misunderstands the temper of the public.

In the interesting and vivid, if unequal, debate between him and Governor ALLEN he didn't answer, though he said he would, if he "had the time," what he called a "catch" question asked by his opponent:

> When a dispute between capital and labor brings on a strike affecting the production or distribution of the necessaries of life, thus threatening the public peace and impairing the public health, has the public any rights in such a controversy, or is it a private war between capital and labor?
> If you answer the question in the affirmative, Mr. GOMPERS, how would you protect the rights of the public?
> And, in addition, I wish him to define for us, if he will, who had the divine right to forbid the switchmen to strike in their "outlaw" strike; who controls this divine right to quit work.

Mr. GOMPERS said that he could answer if he lived long enough. The public answer, labor's answer, prompted by intelligent self-interest as well as perception of the public interest, he will live long enough, we hope, to hear. In vain does he appeal to "freedom" and "right." What freedom is left to men forced, as is so often the case, to strike against their will? What right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness is secured to great populations, to the people of the United States, if transportation and trade are liable at any moment to be suspended; if immense irrecoverable losses can so be caused; if the vital current of commerce and industry can be cut off; if a scarcity of food and fuel can be brought about by the irresponsible action of a few men; if some of the worst results of an effectual blockade by a foreign Power can be accomplished, together with an internal blockade, at the orders of these few private persons, officers of private associations?

To strikes on great public utilities the public showed itself immitigably opposed at the time of the "outlaw" railroad strike. On the day of the Allen-Gompers debate the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee reported favorably Mr. POINDEXTER'S bill to prevent the interruption of that commerce by strikes of railroad employés. The committee added to it a provision prohibiting a conspiracy of two or more persons to cause a strike that would interrupt interstate commerce, and the measure makes a felony the proved intent to check or stop the interstate flow of commodities. Members of Congress are not the bravest of mortals, and to the discipline of organized labor they have shown themselves not seldom meekly obedient. This insertion in the Poindexter bill of strike prohibitions similar to those which were excised from the Railroad Reorganization bill to oblige certain labor chiefs indicates a keener appreciation of public opinion.

Not on acts of Congress or acts of Legislature, however, rest the hope and prospect of abating and ending this outworn, perilous, cruel, wasteful method of the strike. The politicians mostly follow, seldom lead. Our trust is in the intelligence, the feeling for their own interest, the practical sense and the sense of justice of the majority, of the majority of labor unionists. Industrial civilization is become so vast, the economic interrelations are so complex and intimate, that these disturbances produce far-felt injuries.

They have had their day. The thoughtful American workingman sees that strikes cause him irreparable loss, even if successful; that they are a clog on his prosperous activity; that, more and more, they are dictated by other motives than questions of wages or bonus. When Mr. GOMPERS imagines our workingmen as saying: "Well, if "compulsory labor is right, then we "shall all be compelled to labor for "society," they must grin to think of a picture of compulsory labor as ordained by LENIN and their own position as members of the great army of small capitalists. A multitude of them own their own houses. Their thrift has fattened the savings bank deposits. They are bondholders and shareholders. They know voluntary and compulsory strikes that have forced them to lose days, weeks, months of pay. They think of their scot in funds to sustain other strikes. They think of many futile strikes, of many violences. Can labor find no better, wiser, cheaper, surer means of self-protection and self-advancement than the strike? Can't it gain without the inevitable loss which a strike brings?

It seems to us that a better, a saner, a juster way is opening. For all the hot words and the hard, on one side or another, we believe in the fairness, the prudence, the thoughtfulness and the public spirit of the mass of labor organization men. Some day a strike will seem as unintelligible to the community as a sorcery trial seems now.

THE PRESIDENT'S POSITION.

In and out of the Senate the Republican foes of the President, of the Treaty and of the League of Nations times without number have declared that Mr. WILSON is responsible for the defeat of the Treaty because he stubbornly insisted that it must be ratified by the Senate "without the dotting of an i or the crossing of a t."

> We advocate prompt ratification of the Treaty without reservations which would impair its essential integrity.

In a letter to Senator CARTER GLASS, acknowledging the receipt of an authentic copy of the Virginia platform, under date of May 28, President WILSON writes:

> Aside from the purely personal references which, of course, I deeply appreciate, let me say to you, my dear Sir, that the sentiments expressed in this notable document are in full accord with my own views, especially the statements which set forth the attitude of the party on the League of Nations and the pressing problems of peace, finance and reconstruction.

This has been the President's attitude from the beginning. The Republicans who have sought to fix upon him the responsibility for defeating the Treaty know perfectly well that he has always been willing to accept reservations that were not destructive of the purpose of the Covenant, reservations that expressed our understanding of what its provisions mean, what they must mean if they are in accord with our traditions and our Constitution. There is no excuse for misunderstanding the President's position—none, that is, save the conscious purpose to misrepresent it.

GOLD BRICKS IN LONDON.

Mr. KRASSIN, chief commercial representative of the Bolshevist Government of Russia, has at last reached London after waiting in the vestibule at Copenhagen for some little time. The delay was due to his insistence on bringing along with him Mr. MAXIM LITVINOFF, who attained a certain unpopularity in England by vainly encouraging the British workman to revolt in the early months of 1918; but now LITVINOFF is left behind and KRASSIN is in London.

It is as true now as it was last January that Russia needs Europe and Europe needs Russia; but we know a little more now than we did in January about what Russia has to offer, and there is no greater certainty now than there was then that the Russian price would not be ruinously high. Mr. KRASSIN is doubtless prepared to promise that his Government will refrain from intrigues in the Near East, but if the promise is broken Western Europe can do nothing in retaliation but reimpose an embargo on Russian trade. If the Bolsheviki are convinced that Western Europe would never dare to do that, it is the fault of those who have insisted that Russia is a land of milk and honey whose enormous agricultural supplies will appear like magic in Western Europe as soon as the Bolsheviki are recognized.

But the outward and ostensible purpose of the Krassin mission is more modest. According to The London Times it is believed that its principal object is to obtain a general license to send to England ingots of gold stamped with the seal of the old Russian Government and sell them on the British market. This is an enterprise which used to flourish in rural districts until the farmers acquired the habit of biting the gold bricks to see how deep was the coat of gilt. Of course, these ingots will be gold all the way through, and the purpose of the imperial seal is doubtless to soothe the conscience of purchasers who do not want to receive any of the Rumanian gold reserve which the Bolsheviki stole and are still holding. But since the Bolsheviki have the seals as well as the Rumanian gold, it ought to be easy enough to melt it down into ingots and give it the Russian stamp. No recipient can be sure he is not taking in stolen property.

Most significant, however, is the fact that gold alone is offered. It is not gold alone that Western Europe needs; European currencies today are based not on gold but on confidence—confidence in the energy and ability of the various peoples and the good intentions and competence of their Governments. England, France and Italy could use Russian wheat and other agricultural products, but the Russians have none to offer. If there is a surplus it is scattered on the farms in the far interior and can neither be collected by the Government nor shipped to the ports if it were collected. A Government which cannot feed its own urban populations is not going to export much food. Those who have talked of Europe's need of Russia can hardly have meant Russian gold. Russia's need of Europe is far greater, and unless there is a modest degree of wisdom in the economic councils of the west, Russia will get considerably the better of the bargain.

SENATOR JOHNSON VICTIMIZED.

The revelation at Washington that for HIRAM JOHNSON himself more than $200,000 has been spent in the primaries must come as a shock and grief to him. Rich and unscrupulous friends of his must have taken advantage of his ignorance of what was being done in his behalf, for he had distinctly set himself up as the one man who in this campaign was fighting "organized wealth." And he must now seem even to himself almost as the champion of organized hypocrisy. It appears that five or six times as much money has been contributed to his campaign as was given to LOWDEN. And the other Senatorial aspirants are made to look cheap compared with JOHNSON, glorying in his virtuous poverty. When the Senator finds out what sums his old corrupt enemies in California, with whom he has now struck up an alliance, have been flinging into his canvass, we confidently look to him to return the money. We fear, however, that it would be too much to ask him to return the delegates.

THEATRE AND PUBLIC.

The record of the season's theatrical productions published in yesterday's TIMES indicates a change in dramatic conditions the magnitude of which can as yet be imperfectly realized. In spite of the competition of the moving picture houses the popularity of the spoken play has advanced steadily, hugely and with a momentum that gives no sign of slackening. Only a decade ago a "century" run was little short of phenomenal. If a production on tour could boast on its billboard "Over One Hundred Nights on Broadway" it had the most precious of all assets. To attain this record the metropolitan run of many a play was continued until all profits were wiped out in the expectation of recouping the loss on the road. Today one hundred performances is the minimum of success; "the play which "falls below this figure has been a "failure."

For many years the run of MAUDE ADAMS in "The Little Minister" stood as a record. When "Peg o' My Heart" was approaching it, Spring came and the author took counsel as to whether to try to extend the run through the second Summer. He was advised by all means to do so. Even then the size of the new public was making itself felt. There is a population of some six millions centring in New York and in addition a constant stream of hotel transients, many or most of whom keep in touch with the world of Broadway. When a play exerts an appeal which is universal and vigorous there is virtually no limit to its prosperity. The run of "Peg" was ended not by the cessation of its popularity but by the attraction of London; and long before the end of the London run Miss TAYLOR was so wearied with constant repetitions that she fled from her success. The play has not yet been toured in this country. During the past season a full dozen of productions have had between two and three hundred performances, many of which are still in the full tide of success. Three have passed the 300 mark and one scored 452 performances. Some of these, to be sure, were musical pieces and so not strictly within the reckoning; but a full proportion of them were dramatic, and plays of high quality. "The Famous Mrs. Fair" has had 183 performances, "Abraham Lincoln" 193 and "Clarence" 300—and all are to continue indefinitely.

The effect of this flood of popularity upon the quality of the drama has more of good in it, and far less of evil, than might have been expected. Magazine editors have long known that a circulation of hundreds of thousands is no bar to a certain form of even the highest excellence—KIPLING if not GALSWORTHY, STEVENSON if not CONRAD. A similar condition no doubt exists in the theatre, though the limitations upon excellence have been little in evidence during the past season. Few plays have been more subtle in characterization and humor than "Clarence," more reserved and exalted in feeling than "Abraham Lincoln." "Jane Clegg" with 112 performances and "Beyond the Horizon" with 111 are far from the end of their runs, yet both are works of the most uncompromisingly artistic realism, the one distinctly "unpleasant" and the other intensely tragic. Doubtless there are still limitations upon the range of the good things that are possible; yet even the public that once so sparsely attended Ibsen seems vastly upon the increase.

It was the misfortune of the New Theatre that it made its splendid attempt at establishing an artistic tradition before the flood-tide of this new era. Yet even in 1910 its failure was due rather to defects of judgment on the part of the management than to a lack of popular response. If the venture were renewed today, and in the light of the first costly experience, there is little doubt that it would be successful.

WHAT MAY BE DONE FOR ARMENIA.

Chairman PORTER of the House Foreign Affairs Committee wants it known that he is in favor of altruism, but altruism in Mexico. He thinks it utterly absurd to send American soldiers "to Armenia or any other foreign country to settle their political "and economic quarrels." But it is not absurd to send them to Mexico; Mr. PORTER comes out manfully and calls it "forcible intervention," and he is for it.

Meanwhile, what can be done for Armenia aside from the evidently impossible mandate? Friends of Armenia in this country have suggested several measures which, they think, will give the country a good chance to get on its feet. Our Government might sell to Armenia arms and equipment for an army of some 50,000 men and deliver the supplies in the present Armenian capital at Erivan. The railroad from Batum is still in operation and a guard of marines could probably insure safe delivery. Permission to Armenians in this country to volunteer for the Armenian army would raise a force of several thousand men, and there are others in the present nucleus of Armenia who could make good soldiers if they had sufficient arms. Shipment of food should be continued and subscriptions should be taken here for an Armenian loan of perhaps $75,000,000—Armenians in America would take a large part of it—to be administered by an American-Armenian commission, partly for the purchase here of agricultural implements and machinery and partly to establish a basis for an Armenian currency. American financial and administrative experts might be lent to the new Government and a few American officers might be detailed to assist in the organization of the Armenian army. This, with friendly diplomatic observations to European Governments to aid in obtaining an economic outlet for Armenia, might furnish just the margin of assistance required to make the Armenians' efforts to help themselves effective.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Question Still Debatable.

Now that the return to this country of the bodies of soldiers who died abroad has begun, and that scores and scores of them already have arrived, further discussion of the question whether or not this transfer should be made probably would not prevent the continuance and completion of the task.

There was, of course, much to be said in favor of bringing home our dead. The Government, in effect, had promised to do it, or at least no intimation had been given in official circles that the nation's long settled policy in this matter would be changed. The decision, therefore, should, and presumably did, rest on the nature and extent of the demands made by those particularly interested in the disposition of these dead—of their close or near relatives, that is—and there is no doubt that many of them, for reasons easily comprehensible and worthy of respect even by those who were of a different opinion, anxiously and insistently claimed the carrying out of the Government's explicit or implicit contract.

That there was, and is, much to be said against the execution of the plan is also true, and perhaps the strongest of the adverse arguments are those that have caused a very large majority of the surviving soldiers either to refrain from asking for the return to America of their dead comrades or to be openly and emphatically antagonistic to it. Of why they are opposed they say little, for they are considerate of the feelings of those whose feelings deserve consideration, but they know well why a disturbance of these heroic sleepers should be avoided.

Honored and Loved as Brothers.

Highly relevant to determination of where the Americans who died in France should rest are the dispatches from Paris telling in detail of the preparations made by the French people for honoring on our Memorial Day the graves where lie members of the A. E. F. These preparations have been on a large scale, and in carrying them out numerous representatives of every French class have taken a part evidently sincere.

Government officials of all ranks, military men with high titles and private soldiers, civilians almost beyond counting, the clergy—all have united in expressing a reverential sorrow and a warm affection for the soldiers who came from so far to share the dangers and help in bringing to a righteous termination the wickedest as well as the greatest of wars.

Not coldly as aliens and strangers are our dead treated in France, but as brothers, and surely this is something to ease the grief even of a bereaved mother—something to reconcile her to the leaving of her son in a foreign land. There is still time to rescind the demands for the bringing back home of those who made the ultimate sacrifice to the good cause. Sentiment has been met with sentiment and reason with reason.

To be Poor No Claim for Glory.

When a man present at the Gompers-Allen debate in Carnegie Hall was moved to announce himself poorer than Mr. GOMPERS, the latter became appreciably more angry and excited than was really seemly for a philosopher of his age and experience. Of course the interruption was discourteous, its substance irrelevant to the questions at issue, and its implications intentionally offensive, but nobody suspects Mr. GOMPERS of having exploited the workingmen in whose service most of his life has been spent or charges him with having grown rich at their expense.

That being the case, he could have afforded to ignore the foolish comparison of his auditor, as it made no slightest difference to anybody which of the two has less or more money than the other. But Mr. GOMPERS was irritated and he let his irritation become vocal. He offered to bet two cents that he was poorer than the man who had claimed the undesirable superiority, demanded his name, and, when he didn't get it, proceeded to apply to the insinuation he glimpsed in his critic's assertion several harsh epithets, accurate enough, but injudicious.

But why should Mr. GOMPERS, or anybody else, be proud of being "poor"? Ill-gotten wealth is a disgrace, of course, but, in a country of great and many opportunities, poverty is at least as much in need of explanation as is its reverse, and Mr. GOMPERS, who has worked so hard and so long to secure for labor its deserved share of financial prosperity, is not under any obligation to apologize for having received and thriftily saved as much money as is a fair reward for such abilities as his.

For him to have become rich, in the modern acceptation of that word, would not have been wise, and perhaps it would have been wrong, but for him now to be "poor," in the sense of unable to live as becomes an intelligent and industrious American citizen, would be in violation of all that he has preached as a labor leader and to make himself a poor exemplar of his own theories in action.

At least one of the big strikes now going on in this city can be endured with equanimity by everybody except the strikers and their employers—the public, that long-suffering third party, for once being threatened with no real losses.

This well limited labor war is that of the fur workers. There were times, of course, when furs were a necessary of life for everybody living beyond the tropics, for they were almost the only wear of a really protective sort. But those times were ages and ages ago—for everybody except the Eskimos and a few other obstinately hyperborean folk—and now furs come close to being an article of pure luxury, without which it is more than easy to get along quite comfortably.

For them there are substitutes a-plenty, not only "just as good," but in several ways better, or at any rate safer, and though this strike should last forever it would cause no general deprivation. These facts the strikers seem to have forgotten when they drew up their peculiarly stern demands.

They are about as essential to the world's comfort and happiness as are diamond cutters, who also are highly skilled workers with whose services the world could dispense without any real inconvenience.

Europe's Need and Poland's War.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your editorial article you vividly mention the distressing conditions now prevailing in Poland, the Ukraine, Austria, and, in fact, the whole of Eastern Europe.

Mr. Davison, at Des Moines, calls for help from the United States Government amounting to $500,000,000, and you second the call, and I hope and pray that the appeal will vibrate throughout this broad and generous land, and be answered by one and all in the same deepfelt sympathy and sincerity. "Help, help, or we perish!" is the cry.

There is one mystery that I would greatly wish some one would explain—why Poland started war against the Soviet Government of Russia. Why, at such a time, should she propose to raise an army of 1,000,000 or more combatants? Seven hundred and fifty thousand actual fighting men are on a line of 450 miles in the Russian territory, far beyond their line allotted to them by the League of Nations.

Could Poland not have been today in a far better condition had she first put her house in order and used that army to cultivate her vast and rich land, to feed her hungry people and alleviate the starving? The many nurses who are now caring for the wounded and sick soldiers might have given their service to the 250,000 typhus cases Mr. Davison reports.

THEY SLEEP BUT CANNOT DIE.

They sleep
But cannot die—
Men loyal, firm, four-square in strife,
In lusty labor and large life,
Who wrought our spirit's wealth
And ashes made of stealth—
Who found the Golden Fleece
And still lead on in peace,
Though here they lie
In sleep.

They sleep
But cannot die.
Their lordly flag we proudly bear
For which rich blood was shed and rare
When forth youth bore it first
To quench the tyrant's thirst
For power and cleave his chain:
Their blood poured forth like rain,
And here they lie

They sleep
But cannot die—
The brave, the true, the young who chose
To go, to bear the flag of those Who at the bugle call
Leaped forth to proudly fall
That they might carry on
The work of forebears gone.
And here they lie

They sleep
But cannot die,
For now the world is all their own,
And, led by thoughts our brave have sown
Till Might has bowed nor could Withstand the force that stood
Secure and safe, God wrought.
Through stormy times they fought,
And now they lie
In sleep,

They sleep
But cannot die,
And gentle as the Summer breeze
Or bending bud and flower grieves,
We come to deck their graves
And honor give our braves
Whose souls our lives enshrine,
Their glory, yours and mine,
While here they lie
In sleep.

DANES TO AID GERMANS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COPENHAGEN, May 29.—In the course of the next few days negotiations will be carried on in Copenhagen of considerable importance to Danish and German commercial and financial interests. The idea is to make profitable the large Scandinavian stocks of German marks to the mutual advantage of the possessors and German industry and trade. The amount in question should serve as a guarantee, especially for loans for the purchase of raw materials for Germany, being deposited against interest in a new banking concern in Copenhagen, which, in return, guarantees credits which Germany desires for the purchase of goods abroad—for instance, cotton and iron ore.

A similar arrangement recently was made with Holland, where a syndicate has been started under the style of Credit en Belegingsbank. Both the latter and a Danish concern will have an essential influence on the whole German world trade, as they will not only import raw materials and foodstuffs, but also export industrial goods extensively by way of Rotterdam and Copenhagen.

DESCHANEL HAS RECOVERED

But the French President Will Go to the Country for Rest.

PARIS, May 30.—The attending physicians pronounced President Deschanel entirely recovered from the direct injuries which he received in his fall from a train recently, but emphasize that rest is necessary.

The President, therefore, will leave Paris within a week for some country place near by. He expects the Cabinet to come to his country residence occasionally, but his friends are seeking to relieve him as far as possible of all work.

The newspapers, commenting today on the condition of M. Deschanel, say that he is extremely fatigued. Prior to the recent accident he worked many hours a day and far into the night to carry out his desire to receive all callers and keep abreast of affairs.

OBJECT TO ENTENTE BILLS.

Germans Declare Expenses of Official Missions Are Too High.

BERLIN, May 30.—Complaints which have been plentiful in Germany against the high pay and heavy expense bills of the Entente officials on various missions here, the cost of which is charged up to Germany's account, have been added to by the announcement that the allowances of these officials have been raised, making Germany's bill correspondingly higher.

It was stated on behalf of the German Foreign Office today that these expenses aggregated more than 100,000,000 marks daily, while the cost of the armies of occupation is enormous, that of the American army alone, it was declared, being $1,220,000 daily. The Germans likewise declared they were paying a large part of the upkeep of the French army.

CRANE TAKES PEKING POST.

PEKING, May 28.—Charles R. Crane, the new American Minister to China, will assume his post at the legation tomorrow. Mr. Crane arrived in Peking last evening, accompanied by Mrs. Crane and by his private secretaries.

Charles D. Tenney, the Counselor of the Legation, has been granted a leave of absence, but will remain temporarily in the performance of his duties. Willing Spencer, the First Secretary of the Legation, has left for the United States, on his way to Peru.

SEEKS WEALTH IN NORTH.

Norwegian Explorer Hopes to Make $700,000 for Backers.

Christian Leden, Norwegian explorer, said yesterday that when he started on his sixth expedition for the Far North, some time in July, it would be with the purpose not only of gathering scientific information, but also of making a profit of about $700,000 for friends financing the venture.

"It is my plan to take with me a hydroairplane," Mr. Leden said. "The one I have in mind will be fitted with pontoons for rising from and alighting on open water, and with detachable steel runners for use on the ice. The plane will be valuable as a means of finding open water in the ice fields for our ship. It will be just as valuable as an aid to our search for mineral deposits.

"What I am interested in most, personally, is geological, ethnological and anthropological work. My ambitions are purely scientific. But there are great riches in northern Canada, and I think it is perfectly reasonable that those who are paying the expenses of the expedition should make money out of it.

"I expect that a deal of the profits will come from the hides of sea mammals, which make beautiful leather; from seal oil and minerals. The sleeper shark yields a particularly valuable skin. On my previous expeditions I have seen waters full of sleeper sharks."

Mr. Leden said he did not think it advisable to tell the exact destination of his commercial-scientific expedition, its personnel or the names of its backers, at present. He added that it would be sufficient to say his ship would sail from New York "past Labrador and past Baffin's Land." Arrangements have been made, he added to ship back hides and other acquisitions to market.

"I will be glad to get back in the Far North," said Mr. Leden. "Already it is so warm in New York that it is irksome to me. I enjoy frozen raw meat. Frozen deer marrow is more delicious, I think, than ice cream. I grow thin here. I wax fat up there."

NOYES LEAVES RHINE BOARD

PARIS, May 30.—Pierrepont B. Noyes, American member of the Inter-Allied Rhineland Commission, has resigned that post and his resignation has been accepted in Washington, it was stated here today.

All of Noyes's powers will be given over by Major Gen. Henry T. Allen, Commander in Chief of the American Army of Occupation, which will continue likewise in military authority.

This will give the United States single representation in both civil and military affairs in the Rhineland.

Dr. Flexner to Attend Conference.

The American Red Cross announced yesterday that Dr. Simon Flexner, Director of the Rokefeller Institute, had been selected to represent the United States at a conference of the world's leading surgeons on July 5 at Geneva, Switzerland, at the first formal meeting of the Medical Advisory Board of the League of Red Cross Societies. The representatives of other nations at the conference will be Professor Brodet, Belgium; Professor Madsen, Denmark; Professors Roux, Albert and Calmette, France; General Lyle Cummins, Sir Walter Fletcher and Sir George Newman, Great Britain; Professor Bastianello and Dr. Castellani, Italy; Dr. Kinnostke Miura, Japan, and Dr. Chagas, South America.

GRADUATION WEEK OPENS AT COLUMBIA

Baccalaureate Sermon Delivered for First Time to Candidates for Bachelor's Degree Only.

CHAPLAIN KNOX ON TRUTH

Calls Old Structure of Society Too Small Now—Commencement Day Wednesday.

Columbia University's 168th Commencement Week was inaugurated yesterday with the baccalaureate service in St. Paul's Chapel. The sermon was delivered by the Rev. Raymond C. Knox, chaplain of the university, and for the first time in Columbia's history was addressed only to the candidates for the bachelor's degree. The service was more in the nature of a university family affair than a public function. The academic procession was made up entirely of the candidates for the degree of bachelor of arts, bachelor of sciences and bachelor of literature in Barnard, Columbia and Teachers Colleges.

In the sermon Dr. Knox spoke of the significance of the service falling on Memorial Day and said the day was set apart to offer tribute to those who made the sacrifice of life that others might live.

"Never was there a time when men and women were more needed to be fearless witnesses for the truth," said Dr. Knox. "For it is the truth alone that shall set us free. Dwelling as we do in the midst of a wilderness of partisanship and propaganda, how inestimable is the service of him who can detect and blaze the trail that leads to truth. When some are timid lest truth be weak unless hedged about by protecting walls, how valiant for truth is he who dares unbar the gate that it may go forth in its own might to conquer.

"We all realize that the old structure of society in which we have been living is now too small. It is too cramped to meet our growing needs. Our task is to remove those parts which have served their day; to strengthen and save the foundations and those other portions which are still of value; to expand and remodel the old into the adequate new; and at all times to serve to the maximum the needs of men, to meet every one of our present obligations.

"The motto of Columbia to be engraved upon the hearts of our graduates as well as upon their diplomas is, 'In thy light shall we see light.' Truth is light. But light is more. It includes the spirit of unity, loyalty and good will."

The academic procession, viewed by a large crowd of friends and relatives of the graduates, formed in the library at 3:20 P. M., and soon afterward moved into the chapel where it was met by President Nicholas Murray Butler and members of the Board of Trustees, who occupied places in the choir stalls. The candidates for degrees assembled by schools, each in charge of a marshal.

Dr. William T. Manning, rector of Trinity Church and a trustee of the University, took part in the service. Colonel William Barclay Parsons, Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the University, read the lesson. A special musical program was rendered under the direction of Walter Henry Hall, Professor of Church and Choral Music.

The removal of the baccalaureate service from the gymnasium, where it was usually held, to the chapel, eliminated the trustees and Faculty sections from the academic procession. Many trustees and officers attended the service.

The senior class day exercises will take place at 1:30 P. M. today in the grove. The Alumni Federation will meet at 11 A. M. Phi Beta Kappa exercises will be held tomorrow at 8 P. M. in Havemeyer Hall. The Phi Beta poem will be read by Amy Lowell, and the oration will be delivered by John Bassett Moore. His subject will be "Executive Responsibilities and Irresponsibilities."

Commencement day is on Wednesday. The degrees will be conferred in the forenoon. There are to be alumni luncheons and then at 2:30 a costume parade on South Field. Other events of the day will include a baseball game between Columbia and the University of Pennsylvania, class reunions, Barnard alumnae supper, Columbia alumni supper, and an alumni "sing" on the library steps.

SERBIAN CHILD AID PARTY.

Three thousand or more children joined in the celebration of the "world's biggest birthday party" at the Hippodrome yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the National Birthday Committee of the Serbian Child Welfare Association of America. Each admission ticket represented a contribution of $72 to maintain a Serbian child at one of the institutions operated by the association in Serbia. It was announced that the party had been the means of swelling the fund by approximately $300,000.

Among those who purchased a ticket and thereby adopted a Serbian orphan was Mrs. Woodrow Wilson. Rose Montal Betti of the Greenwich House, went to the party as the holder of the ticket purchased by Mrs. Wilson. Another child from the Greenwich House, Marion Massa, was admitted by a ticket bought by Mrs. Abram I. Elkus. Mrs. Elizabeth Milbank Anderson subscribed for tickets for 1,100 pupils of the New York public schools, her contribution being $79,200, the largest individual gift in the national campaign to relieve the distress of half a million destitute Serbian children.

The exercises included addresses by Captain Stanley H. Howe, National Chairman of the association, Thomas W. Churchill, Chairman of the Schools Division; and Sergeant Ruth Farnam, who has been decorated five times and wears the insignia of a special citation for her services with the Serbian army.

In addition to the addresses there were a number of readings, songs and entertainments by children. Marie Dressler gave one of her humorous acts; readings were given by Miss Dagmar Perkins with Miss Rose Diamond as accompanist and Mme. Desiree Lubovska danced.

It was announced that the New York school children, who composed a majority of the audience, had themselves contributed $30,000 to the fund.

NO SIGN OF SLUMP IN PRICES IN PARIS

PANIC FEARED IN HAVRE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 30.—News of the slump in the prices of commodities in America and England has roused great interest here. The newspapers have devoted much space to the subject, emphasizing the fact that the slump was due, in many cases, to the refusal of the public to buy goods at exorbitant prices, to the action of leagues against the high cost of living, &c. They prophesied a speedy fall in prices here and urged the French public to hasten and accentuate it by following the American example.

So far the hope has been doomed to disappointment. Food prices have fallen a trifle as the Summer brings a more abundant supply but retail goods are still on the upward grade. There are two reasons for this. First, retailers have got the habit of saying to customers who show reluctance to buy dear goods, "It will be higher next month—you had better take it now." And as they have invariably proved correct, the customers have got the habit of buying today lest they may have to pay more tomorrow.

Secondly, the French are spending money as they have never spent it before, partly because they have more to spend because of the very wide distribution of war wealth throughout the country and partly because of the psychological reason that this year, for the first time, they fully realize that the war is over—and their free spending is one symptom of the reaction from war anxiety—and partly because the successful renewal of business affairs by men who last year were still in the army or newly demobilized has caused extensive purchases which they were then unable or unwilling to make.

As far as Paris is concerned, a great influx of foreigners with their pockets full of money and the recent tremendous boom on the Stock Exchange in which everyone seemed to be making fortunes helped greatly to raise prices, while in the country the abnormal profits of the agricultural element had exactly the same effect. For these reasons, too, the formation of leagues to lower the cost of living advocated by the newspapers received little or no support.

People wanted what they wanted, and wanted it quickly. They would sooner pay a big price than wait—especially as experience had shown them that the longer they waited the more they would have to pay. For, in two important particulars, the question of prices in France differs from that of America and Great Britain. Firstly, owing to war restrictions on transport the supply of goods has always been behind the demand and there has been no accumulation of stocks which would have to be thrown on the market at cheaper rates if a large number of people deliberately refused to buy.

This at least has been the case until very recently, and still is the case with manufactured goods. But as regards raw material imported from abroad there has come a great change in the last month. The Port of Havre, in particular, is literally choked with immense stocks of cotton, wool, hides, coffee and other materials, all bought when France was at its very lowest point. A rise of 25 per cent. has proved quite disastrous to the owners of the materials, who have been unable to dispose of them on the French market without ruinous loss.

Meanwhile storage charges, &c., are piling up, and one Exelsior correspondent, who has been investigating the situation, states that the Havre business world is anxious to the verge of panic, and that a widespread crash is feared unless francs fall rapidly. Even then, he asserts, important failures are inevitable, as the American and British slumps in wholesale prices have had their counterpart here, and without taking the exchange rate into consideration, the owners of the Havre stocks are already confronted by a dead loss of from 20 to 30 per cent.

If, as appears probable, all these stocks are thrown on the market at no matter what sacrifice, the slump cannot fail ultimately but to lower retail prices which, in the opinion of French economists, when the fall begins will fall very rapidly. In support of this view, they argue that the Government measures to lessen the profits of middlemen and the vigorous campaign against profiteering by retailers will then make its effects felt.

SOCIAL NOTES.

New York.

Mrs. John W. Mackay has decided to make her future home in her native country and has just sold her London house and will return here with her son Clarence H. Mackay, who went abroad some weeks ago. Mrs. Mackay will be at Harbor Hill until Mr. Mackay goes to Southampton for the Summer, where she will accompany him.

The Countess de Rodellec and her granddaughter, Mlle. de Malaysses, who spent the Winter and Spring at the St. Regis, sailed on the France for France, where the Countess, a sister of Mrs. Charles A. Post, owns a château.

Mrs. A. Leo Everett and her daughter, Miss Elise Everett, of 130 East Sixty-seventh Street, will leave town early in June for Bar Harbor to spend the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Roland L. Redmond came in Saturday from The Pines, Tivoli, N. Y., to spend several days at the St. Regis.

Mrs. Warren Luqueer Green, who arrived last week on the France, having spent the Winter and Spring in Paris, is at the Chatham until she goes to the country.

The wedding tomorrow of Miss Helen Stagg, niece of Mrs. Arthur E. Benjamin, and Remsen McKim, which will be at the Gotham, instead of being a large affair as planned, is to be very small, owing to the recent death of Mr. McKim's father, Robert A. McKim.

Mrs. Pierre Jay and the Misses Ellen, Anna and Frances Jay of 152 East Seventy-ninth Street are leaving town Wednesday for their country place, Black Point, at Crescent Beach, Conn.

Hot Springs.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Ballin, before their departure for New York last evening, drove around Cascade Mountain and to Healing Springs.

Mrs. Pembroke Jones of New York, with her son Pembroke Jones, Jr., have arrived for a visit of three weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. John C. Scott of London and George E. Scott of Dundee, Scotland, arrived yesterday by automobile on a tour of the Virginias.

Miss Jean Leonard of New York has joined her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen J. Leonard.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund A. Lynch of Cedarhurst, L. I., gave a picnic luncheon near Bath Alum.

PITTSBURGH, May 30.—Miss Helen Grimes, President of the Congress of Women's Clubs of Allegheny County, has been appointed by the Department of Justice as one of three women to direct a countrywide campaign against the high cost of living by striking particularly against the purchases of luxuries.

Miss Grimes will have charge of the work in the central section of the country from Ohio to Kansas. She will conduct her campaign with the aid of women's clubs and other social and civic organizations. She intends with the next week to carry her fight against high prices into Columbus, Dayton, Cleveland and Reading, Pa.

SECRET BRIDE'S BODY FOUND

Elizabeth Schmitter Jumped from Weehawken Ferryboat Nov. 14.

The body of Elizabeth H. Schmitter, 23 years old, who jumped from a Weehawken ferryboat on Nov. 14 last, was recovered yesterday off Pier 11, West New York.

The young woman, it was learned after she had been drowned, was secretly married to Edward Moffatt of 439 Twenty-second Street, West New York. Moffatt was a law student at Columbia.

The parents of the young woman live in Cleveland. At the time of her death it was reported to the police that she had been the victim of "poison pen" letters, said to have been written by an Army officer.

DR. GEO. MORRISON DIES IN LONDON

FAR EASTERN TRAVELER

Passed an Eventful Life in Strange Lands—Had Rare Knowledge of Oriental Diplomacy.

LONDON May 30.—Dr. George Morrison, political adviser to the President of the Chinese Republic, and famous as the Peking correspondent of The London Times, died at a nursing home in London today.

Dr. Morrison was appointed political adviser to the President of the Chinese Republic on Aug. 1, 1912, for a term of five years. The appointment occasioned no surprise at the time. Dr. Morrison had been the Peking correspondent of The London Times since 1895 and had been credited with more influence at the Chinese capital than any of the foreign Ministers. He had shown an amazing command of information regarding the inner workings of an almost inaccessible diplomacy. His power at Peking was admitted by the native political leaders of all parties, who were wont to consult him in nearly every crisis.

He was born in Geelong, Victoria, Australia, in 1862, his father being the principal of Geelong College. When he failed to pass the examinations for the university the wanderlust seized him and he shipped as an ordinary seaman on a voyage to the South Sea Islands to study the traffic in Kanakas, who were imported to Australia as laborers. His fearless articles on the evils of the business brought much criticism on his head, but his words brought reforms.

Shipping on strange ships, travelling in strange company to strange lands, in such ways he passed most of his eventful life, until he settled in Peking. He walked over two thousand miles on one trip in 125 days, swimming rivers, cooking his own food. On an expedition to New Guinea he was left for dead in the bush with two native spear heads in his body.

Dr. Morrison had begun medical studies at Melbourne, and it was while convalescing from the persistent effects of these spear wounds that he continued his preparation for the medical degree which he eventually received from the Edinburgh University.

But the degree he had won did not remove the roving spirit from his nature. In 1887 he stowed away with the 1240th emigrant, then went to Jamaica and tramped all over the island. Back to the United States he came as an assistant purser an a fruit steamer. Then a year and a half as assistant medical officer at the Rio Tinto copper mines in Spain. It was just a step or two over to Morocco, where he served for a time as court physician to the Shereef of Wazan.

After another walk, from Spain, to Paris, he studied for a while at the French capital and returned to Australia, where he spent two years as hospital surgeon at Ballarat. Again the road called him and he visited China, Japan and the Philippines before starting on another journey that took him on foot across China, from Shanghai to the Burmese frontier, some 3,000 miles. He was not really familiar with the language, he travelled alone, bore no arms and dressed as a native. The trip took ninety days and cost the doctor $90. His experiences were recorded in his book "An Australian in China."

On visiting England soon afterward The London Times sent him to Siam, where political clouds were gathering. He spent a year there tramping over the country, making his accustomed studies of the people and their customs. He almost died of the bubonic plague, effecting a cure by what he called "an ordeal by fire."

When established by The Times as its representative at Peking he had the assurance of a man possessing accurate knowledge and he proceeded to fearlessly blaze his own trail as newspaper correspondent. He formed confidential relations with the powerful men of the country and followed the moves on the diplomatic chessboard with the precision of a master. His policy in general was directed toward permanent gains, not cheap, ephemeral successes.

Dr. Morrison more than once blocked diplomatic moves that tended to the disruption of China and thus made enemies among certain foreigners. Yet he constantly increased his power, always treading his own path, asking and accepting no favors. At the Portsmouth Peace Conference he was one of the most impressive of the varied personalities gathered there.

And Peking knew Morrison not only as a journalist and diplomat, but as a physician also. Although the theory rather than the practice of medicine attracted him he never failed to give friendly service when called upon. He always contended that good nursing was more essential than good doctoring and often proved his belief by doing the nursing himself.

TURKS ASK MORE TIME TO ANSWER ON TREATY

PARIS, May 30.—The Turkish peace delegation has sent a note to the Peace Conference asking a further delay, until July 11, to present the delegation's answer to the Allies regarding the Peace Treaty, it was officially announced today.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 27.—The full text of the Turkish Treaty is expected to reach Constantinople within two or three days. In the meantime the Turkish papers are making clear their view that no Government dare sign the treaty without modifications.

Damad Ferid Pasha, Grand Vizier, is busily engaged in drafting representations, asking that the provisions relating to Thrace and Smyrna be altered, as well as the capitulation provisions. It is generally believed here that failure of the Turks to sign would result in a movement of Greek forces from Smyrna toward the interior of Anatolia.

ALEXANDER S. BACON DIES IN BROOKLYN

Colonel Alexander S. Bacon, lawyer, died Saturday night at his home, 101 Rugby Road, Brooklyn, aged 66 years, of complications that followed an attack of pneumonia in London last Autumn.

He was born in Jackson, Mich., and was graduated from West Point with the class of "rebellious '76." After three years as an artillery Lieutenant he gave up the army and became a lawyer, moving to Brooklyn to practice in 1880. He was once commanding officer of the 2d Provisional Regiment, N. G. N. Y., and was elected to the Legislature in 1887 and conducted the work of the Bacon Investigating Committee that investigated political affairs in his own city. In politics Colonel Bacon was an independent Democrat. In 1906 he ran for Justice of the Supreme Court on the Independence League ticket, and in 1913 he was nominated for the same office under the emblem of the American Party, founded by William Sulzer, whom he defended in the impeachment trial at Albany.

Colonel Bacon was a lecturer and a prolific writer on legal, military and Masonic subjects.

STANDARD EIGHT
A Powerful Car

THE power of the Standard Eight is stressed because the car is balanced to emphasize the virtues of its power.

With greater horsepower per pound of weight than is found in any other powerful car, the Standard Eight will do anything in operation that any other car can do, and do it far more economically.

HIGH PRICE CAUSES ARE STILL IN FORCE

Chicago) there is a great demand for credit in agricultural districts, the serious shortage of farm labor as well as cold weather and large rainfall having hindered farm work. Spring wheat acreage has been restricted, but the crop is now doing well.

"The transportation tieup is reported from all districts as having prevented normal movement to the markets as well as for export, and a correspondingly larger use of credit. Large stocks of both corn and wheat are being carried on farms, in elevators and elsewhere.

Steel Mills Booked Ahead.

"In iron and steel demand has continued very heavy and steel mills are booked far ahead. The ore situation is, however, not improved. Lake transportation has been slow. The railroads can handle only a small portion of the ore which is ready for shipment. A shortage of coal in the Northwest is expected. Shipments of ore for April were only 231,000 tons, compared with 1,400,000 in April, 1919.

"In District No. 3 (Philadelphia) the general iron and steel market has been much quieter lately and buying has slackened. The level of prices continues firm. Some mills have been fortunately situated in possessing a large supply of raw materials, and orders in practically all lines are booked for a long time ahead.

"Coal conditions have been particularly important in connection with iron and steel, as with other industries. The state of things in regard to coal is now very acute in some districts. In District No. 2 (New York) the supply is far below the demand and consumers are bidding against one another. Railroads 'are more or less the victims of systematic sabotage at their terminals.'

"The car supply at the mines is only 30 per cent. of normal, while the labor situation there is also unsettled. The situation as a whole 'is such as to cause considerable concern among conservative coal men' and transportation is regarded as a fundamental factor requiring improvement.

"Production of bituminous coal for the country at large during April amounted to 32,006,000 tons as compared with 46,792,000 tons during March, and 42,164,000 tons during March, 1919, the respective index numbers being 86, 126 and 87.

"Prices of leather are down to 80 cents from a peak of $1.75 per foot. Dealers stopped buying about the middle of May.

"Textile production has been subject to many disturbing conditions. In the New Bedford district of Massachusetts, textile strikes of some importance have occurred. An advance of wages of about 15 per cent. in the principal textile centers of New England has been announced. High prices for cotton continue, with very little indication of a reduction.

"In wool, the auction sales at Boston have resulted in the purchase of only about 30 per cent. of offerings, and prices were off about 20 per cent. from the previous sales of English wool. Prices of American wool are off 10 per cent., and on lower grades 10 to 15 per cent.

"Building activity continues well sustained in many sections, although seriously curtailed in certain districts, such as Chicago, by the shortage of materials and by increased prices."

EXPECTS PRICE CUTS WILL BE PERMANENT

Boston Federal Reserve Chairman Says Public's Attitude Is Chiefly Responsible.

Commodity prices in the New England States have begun to come down, due, in the opinion of Frederic H. Curtiss, Chairman and Federal Reserve Agent of the Boston Federal Reserve Bank, to the refusal of the public to pay the high quotations on many classes of goods. Price reductions, Mr. Curtiss holds, really began in February, when readjustments, started "under the surface," as he puts it, were well veiled during March, became somewhat more noticeable in April and, he says, "now, at the end of May, the shifting economic currents have begun to visibly break through."

"Pressure on manufacturers, particularly of shoes and cloth, for lower cost goods, is being felt noticeably," he continues, in his monthly review of the situation. "Large department stores and shops specializing in wearing apparel are liquidating inventories by means of appreciable price reductions, cancelation of orders in certain cases and hesitancy in making commitments for another season's goods at the prices demanded by jobbers and wholesalers; and with the logical result that middlemen, confronted on the one hand by this pronounced attitude on the part of the retailer and on the other by difficulties in procuring bank accommodation with which to carry their surplus stocks, are beginning to show symptoms of a willingness to unload at lower terms than manufacturers' prices."

KELLY'S BIG STICK SUBDUES PHILLIES

First Sacker's Three Hits Account for Eight of Giants' Runs in 10 to 6 Victory.

TONEY SLIPS UP IN EIGHTH

Visitors Rally and Rap New Yorker Out of Box—Hubbell Is Successful in Rescue Act.

George Kelly swung a mean stick at the Phillies yesterday at the Polo Grounds and clubbed the Quakers into submission. The big first baseman of the Giants injected a brace of timely doubles and a valuable single into the final tilt of the series with the Phils, pushing six runs over the dish and carrying two over in his own name. This healthy slugging was enough to offset a spirited uprising by the Cravath clan in the eighth inning and give the Giants the verdict by the score of 10 to 6.

Kelly started to spoil the afternoon for the Phils in the second inning, when he doubled to left and erased a lead which the visitors had picked up. In the third and seventh frames the big first-sacker did some thumping that seemed entirely useless, as Fred Toney was stepping along like a sure winner. But Toney was so severely raked in the eighth inning that he had to be removed during a batting spree by the Phils. Then it was discovered that Kelly's second and third outbursts had not been all in vain.

The rush of the Cravath corps in the eighth frame put real life into a game that appeared to be all ready for the embalmer. From the first to the eighth innings Toney had allowed only one clean hit and three infield scratches and there was no suspicion that he would blow up, but he did. The Giants were breezing along on an eight-run lead when the inning opened, but that proved no fat for the fire minutes that McGraw rushed Wilbur Hubbell in to finish the inning.

Stengel Clears the Barrier.

Casey Stengel, who had been a target for the 23,000 fans up to the eighth, got the usual reception when he ambled to the plate to start the inning. This time the laugh was on the crowd and not on Casey. He slapped a ball over the left field barrier for a home run, just as Larry Doyle had done on Thursday, and as few left-hand hitters have done in recent years at the Polo Grounds. That punch had the same effect on the Phils' stickwork as a raisin exerts in home brew.

The eight-run lead had been cut in half, two runners were on the paths and only one out. Over on the Giants' bench, McGraw decided that he had seen enough of Toney for the afternoon, and flashed the wigwag for a rescuer. Hubbell, who had been warming up in the bull pen, came in and quickly retired the side. Bancroft lifted to Kauff for the second out and Hubbell made a nice play at first base when Burns was grounded to Kelly some distance from the bag.

Kelly on Gallia's Trail.

Cravath called on his new acquisition from the American League, Bert Gallia, to take the odd game of the series, and Bert started as if he might turn the trick. In the first inning he set down Burns and Young on strikes before Fletcher noisted to Stengel for the third out. In the second frame, Kelly began to make the afternoon a miserable one for the veteran, and in the third he completed the job. After the big first baseman had cleaned the sacks with a double in the third, it was simply a case of Gallia's finishing the inning and then making his exit.

A pass to Doyle started the Giants on their way in the second. Gallia thought he had put over a third strike on Larry, but Umpire Moran held a different view and Doyle took a walk. Kauff lined a single against the right field wall and Casey Stengel played the carom well but forgot to keep his feet together. The ball didn't even hesitate for Casey but rolled far into right field and Benny raced to third while Doyle scored. Sicking was on Gallia's fumble, Kauff holding third. Then Kelly got in the first of his timely socks, a double along the left field line, scoring Kauff and Sicking, some loose fielding by Meusel helping in the second run. Kelly was stranded when the next two batsmen went out in order.

Young had been set down in the third frame when Fletcher singled past Ralph Miller, and Doyle followed with a single to left. Kauff could find nothing to hit this time, his drive to centre being captured by Cy Williams. A pitched ball, which grazed the front of Sicking's blouse, filled the corners and set the stage for Kelly to do some more damage. He responded this time with a double off the right field wall, the ball eluding Stengel and rolling far afield, while Fletcher, Doyle and Sicking reported at the plate. Kelly crossed the dish on a Texas leaguer by Earl Smith, which fell between Jack Miller and Stengel. Toney forced Smith at second base, ending the inning.

Young Spoils Doyle's Hit.

The Giants missed a run in the fourth by an odd play and Larry Doyle missed a hit on the same. After Burns had singled, Young reached first on a fielder's choice. He stole second and went to third on a wild pitch after Fletcher flied to Meusel for the second out. Doyle saw a good spot to lay down a bunt and tapped the ball toward third base. He would have had a hit if Young had stuck to third but Ross tried to score and was smothered on a close play at the plate, Betts to Tragesser.

Another New York run drifted over in the fifth inning. After Kauff had grounded out to Paulette, Sicking walked and stole second. Kelly flied to Williams for the second out and Smith singled to right, scoring Sicking. Toney followed with the first of his two clean hits, but a strikeout by Burns ended the inning without any further scoring.

In the seventh Kelly pushed another run over and then brought in the final marker himself. Kauff walked and stole second, a popular pastime with the Giants all through the game. Tragesser tore up Henry Fabian's lawn in several places in his efforts to get a throw down to Bancroft or Miller. Sicking's out sent Benny along to third and Kelly furnished the transportation home with a single to left field. Long George made a dash for second and reached the bag safely, while Tragesser was bruising the lawn. After Smith had fouled to Tragesser, Toney connected for another single and Kelly reported with New York's final run.

This brought the game down to a 10 to 2 basis and started a flock of fans on their homeward journey. Those who remained saw one of the best exhibitions of consecutive hitting that has been displayed at the Polo Grounds this season, but it fell short of effacing the big lead which Kelly had piled up for the Giants.

ROBINS FARE WELL ON SCOTT'S PITCHING

Brooklyn romped away with an easy victory at Ebbets Field yesterday afternoon, taking its third consecutive game from Boston by a score of 5 to 2 and finishing the series on the profitable end of a count of three games to one. The Braves made themselves as disagreeable as possible in the opening game, but from then on behaved in a manner more befitting their station, so much so that their departure filled the bosoms of their hosts with regret. Flatbush hated to see them go and hopes they will come soon again when they can stay longer.

Zach Wheat and his big black bat played the major part in the festivities attending the Boston farewell. Zach's method of speeding the parting guest was far from considerate. He poked out three safe bingles in four times at bat, knocked in three runs and scored two himself. As the Dodgers' total was five runs it may be seen that Zach's share in the gratifying outcome of the matinee was by no means tiny. If there is any little thing any one of the 16,000 odd attendants at yesterday's debate can do for Zach, he has only to say the word. Information was given out yesterday that he had already purchased his new straw lid and that the 16,000 offered him would not be needed.

But, though Wheat supplied most of the ammunition in the Dodger attack, he was by no means the whole works. The Brooklyn outfit played high-grade baseball behind the brilliant pitching of Sherry Smith. Sherry's port-side flings (the Sherry-port stuff, incidentally, furnishing a wag in the bleachers with a sad line of comedy) had the Braves hypnotized. The first Boston run was a gift, pure and simple, more simple, in fact, than pure, and the second came in the ninth inning when Smith, with the game well in hand, decided he could afford to ease up and kid the visitors along a bit so they would be glad to call again.

Robins Bunch Hits Off Scott.

Scott did the flinging for Stallings and the choice was perfectly satisfactory to the home team. The Robins hit safely in each of the first seven innings, clustering their clouts with run-making results in the fourth, fifth and seventh. They were there with the wallop when the wallop was needed, and whatever Scott chose to serve up was all the same to them.

Announcement was made before the game of a new system of policing the grounds and the fans were warned that balls batted into the grandstand were the property of the club and that anybody found guilty of feloniously and maliciously deporting them would be dealt with according to law. Unusually few balls landed in the stands, as it turned out, and the cops had little to do by way of depriving the fans of their fun.

Although the Robins injected a single apiece into the first three innings, they did not break into the run column until the fourth. Wheat delivered the initial blow in the fourth after Johnston had grounded out. This was a single to centre. Myers dumped the ball in front of the plate and Holke dropped Scott's throw. It was a single in any event and shoved Wheat around to third. Mitchell sent his captain home with a safety to right and went to second on Sullivan's throw, which nipped Myers at third. Kilduff lofted to Bailey for the third out.

Three hits and an error added two more for Brooklyn in the fifth. Krueger doubled Bailey back almost to the scoreboard to take his long fly. Smith reached first on Ford's error and went to second on Olson's single past third. Neis's grounder bounded over Scott's head for a single and the bases were crowded. Johnston popped to Boeckel, but Wheat scored Smith and Olson on his stinging hit between third and short. Myers flied to centre for the final out.

Wheat Bangs Out a Double.

The other two Dodger tallies were put over with two down in the seventh. Olson singled for a starter and Neis, attempting to sacrifice, popped to Holke. Olson was thrown out trying to steal. Johnston walked and scored on Wheat's two-bagger to centre, which Powell handled none too cleanly. Zach tallied on Myers's safe blow past third and Mitchell ended the rally with a long fly to right. Sherry Smith banged out a triple in the eighth with two out, but was left. The Dodgers didn't need the run anyway.

Boston's first tally came in the sixth. The first two up were quickly disposed of, but Sullivan crashed out a single to centre. Holke walked. Boeckel hit in front of the plate, and Krueger's throw to Mitchell was a bit wide, though the latter should have been able to hang on to it. Sullivan scored on the error. Smith trapped Boeckel off first a moment later for the third out.

Sullivan, who, with two hits and a base on balls, was the only Brave to fatten his average to any considerable extent at Smith's expense, tripled to the bleachers in left field in the ninth. After Holke had struck out Sullivan scored on Boeckel's single past Olson. Maranville hit into a double play.

SKEETERS TRIUMPH OVER ORIOLES, 6-2

Hard Hitting in First and Eighth Innings Gives Donovan's Men Another Victory.

A breezy start and a snappy finish by Bill Donovan's Skeeters resulted in their success against Jack Dunn's Orioles in yesterday's battle at the Jersey City ball park by a score of 6 to 2. It was Jersey City's second victory of the current series. Lively application of the wood in the first and eighth periods did the trick for the Jerseymen. In the other frames it was an even battle.

Bill Donovan's athletes continued their splendid streak of batting that has featured the work since their home coming. Frank's delivery was punctured for a total of twelve bingles, five of these being made in the eighth inning for a total of four runs.

It was fortunate for the Skeeters that they made their good wind-up, for the Orioles, after having failed to register in the other rounds, suddenly came to life with a hot finish in the ninth and got to Grevell's delivery for a pair of doubles and a single. This rally earned them a pair of runs and spoiled Jersey City's good intentions of presenting them with a shut-out.

Manager Jack Dunn, who had been absent since last Tuesday because of the death of his mother at her home in Chicago, rejoined the club while the game was in progress.

Bill Grevell pitched cleverly for Jersey City for eight innings and found little trouble in blocking the Birds' scoring attempts. He had a bad inning, however, at the finish, when three hits and a base on balls netted two runs.

NEW REGULATIONS SAFEGUARD BOXING

FAN TO BE USED, NOT TOWEL

Medical Supervision Will Demand Clean and Skillful Bouts—Champions Must Box Every 6 Months.

Boxing under the Walker bill in this State will be conducted under vastly different conditions than those which have previously governed the sport under the old Horton and Frawley laws. The rules and regulations formulated by the Army, Navy and Civilian Board of Boxing Control and the International Sporting Club, which have been adopted by the Legislature for the regulation of boxing and sparring matches, provide many departures from the rules of the past, and are calculated to elevate the sport and firmly install it as a legitimate enterprise on a plane of respectability and attractiveness paralleling that of other forms of athletics.

Safeguards against all objectionable features which have marred boxing in the past are provided in the rules announced yesterday by Secretary Adam Empie of the International Sporting Club. These rules will govern all future boxing matches in the State. They have been devised as the result of the labors of many influential members of the International Sporting Club, the Army, Navy and Civilian Board of Boxing Control, familiar with the sport through many years of association. William A. Gavin, whose labors have contributed much to the attainment by the two organizations of their present satisfactory position, has been largely instrumental in formulating the rules. Mr. Gavin has retired from active part in the organizations to attend to his own private affairs until such time as the International Sporting Club is opened. The Directors of the I. S. C. and the Army, Navy and Civilian Board of Boxing Control will give their third supper at the Hotel Commodore next month, and the event will be made the occasion for a testimonial to the retiring officer.

The rules have been adopted to clarify and standardize such regulations necessary for the control of match-making and championship contests. Particular attention has been paid to provisions which will eliminate practices detrimental to the sport and which have been responsible for bringing boxing into disrepute. Observance of the rules and strict adherence to their provisions will go a long way toward preventing misunderstandings and promoting a spirit of fair play and sportsmanship which is vital to the success of any sport.

Standards Are Clarified.

Special emphasis has been placed upon the necessity for adequate medical supervision and accurate weighing of contestants for all bouts; the encouragement and reward of clean boxing and skillful aggressive action opposed to tactics of stalling and covering up; provisions clearly defining standards and methods for judging the merits of competitors and a plan of practical cooperation between the referee and the judges, who keep a running score of points and penalties throughout bouts; and the compulsory requirement for a champion in each class to defend his title at regular intervals against a challenger who may be judged best qualified for a try at the title.

Champions will be compelled to defend their titles in a bona fide championship bout against the best available contender within a period of six months from the date of winning their titles, and thereafter every six months if a qualified challenger appears, unless prevented by circumstances beyond their control. Forfeiture is the penalty to be imposed for failure to live up to this rule or inability to make the required championship weight.

Weights Are Increased.

Practically all the weights in the various divisions have been increased over what has been recognized in the past. In addition junior classes have been installed in all divisions up to welterweights. The weights are as follows:

Junior flyweight, 109 pounds; flyweight, 112; junior bantamweight, 115; bantamweight, 118; junior featherweight, 122; featherweight, 126; junior lightweight, 130; lightweight, 135; junior welterweight, 140; welterweight, 147; middleweight, 160; light-heavyweight, 175; heavyweight, all over 175.

The time for weighing in has been fixed at eight hours before the bout, instead of seven as heretofore. Gloves will weigh not more than five ounces, three ounces less than the weight now sanctioned in bouts in New Jersey. The referee, it is provided in the rules, will take his position in or near the ring, as the circumstances demand.

Absentees May Be Counted Out.

Provision against a recurrence of the confusion which attended the Dempsey-Willard bout at Toledo is furnished in a rule which stipulates that if a contestant leaves the ring during the one minute intermission and fails to return before the gong rings to resume boxing, the referee shall count him out the same as if he were down. If a contestant who has been knocked or has fallen through the ropes fails to return immediately, the referee may count him out as if he were down.

The judges will sit on opposite sides of the ring and will render a decision if the contest lasts the limit of rounds scheduled. The awards will be based primarily on effectiveness, points being scored for clean, forceful hitting, aggressiveness, defensive work, ring generalship and sportsmanlike actions in the ring. Points will be deducted when a contestant persistently delays the action of a bout by clinching or lack of aggressiveness and for fouling, whether intentional or not. In the event of a disagreement the referee will declare the winner.

Three hours prior to entering the ring each contestant must submit to a thorough examination by a physician who has been licensed to practice not less than three years previously. The physician will remain in attendance during the bout, prepared to deal with any emergency which may arise.

Fan Replaces the Towel.

Seconds have been limited to a maximum of three for each boxer and are restricted in their actions during the progress of the bout. The purpose of this rule is to eliminate the tireless run of advice which is yelled by a boxer's army of advisers as the match progresses. Fans will replace towel-swinging between rounds.

A boxer will be considered down when any part of the body other than his feet is on the floor, when he is hanging helplessly on the ropes, and when he is rising from a down position. Fouls, for which disqualification may be the penalty, will include holding or deliberately maintaining a clinch; holding with one hand and hitting with the other; hitting with the butt of the hand, wrist or elbow; hitting or flicking with the open glove; wrestling or roughing on the ropes; purposely going down without being hit; kidney punching, pivot blow and the use of abusive or profane language.

Bouts are prohibited when the contestants differ in weight in excess of eighteen pounds, except in the light-heavyweight and heavyweight classes. In the past ten pounds difference has been set as the maximum. Provision is also made for a boycott on boxers who have been convicted of violation of the selective service law.

Tie in College Point Shoot.

Walter Lineau broke forty-four clay birds and, on his handicap of 6, returned a full score in a 50-bird handicap at the traps of the College Point Rod and Gun Club yesterday. He was tied for first honors with Fred Roehlein, who broke 50 and also had a full score on his handicap of 16. The shoot-off was deferred. Eugene Weed had a total of 44, on his handicap of 10, and finished third.

Comment on Current Events in Sports.

Baseball's Star Attraction.

Eleven home runs to date, and more than four months to collect the nineteen needed to smash his 1919 record! These are the figures confronting Babe Ruth, and if his batting of the last few days furnishes a true line on future happenings it is probable that the Yankee slugger will go far beyond the mark which a year ago was regarded as the last word in home run hitting.

Ruth's achievement of hitting eleven home runs in the current month, despite his absence from several games, will go down in baseball history as the best mark yet attained by any hitter. During his great batting spurt last Summer Ruth hit nine home runs in July, but he has bettered that figure recently, and still has two more games today to add to the total for a single month. It would not be surprising, in view of the batting form he has been showing in recent games, if the home run king should reach the half-way mark of a new record before the Yankees finish up the home stand which opens at the Polo Grounds today and closes on Sunday next. Some double-headers are on the card, and four home runs will carry Ruth to fifteen circuit drives, or half of the total which he must reach to set a new mark.

If Ruth should succeed in setting up a new mark for home runs it would be unfair to point to the short right field stand in the Polo Grounds as a big factor in his successful onslaught on the former record. Most of the drives which Ruth has made up to date were long and hard enough to earn him home runs on any ball park in the major leagues. He has not needed any looping drives into the lower stand at the Polo Grounds to swell his total of circuit drives. In his collection of eleven home runs this season are two drives over the top of the big grand stand, four more which smoked a trail high into the upper deck, one which went between stand and bleachers, and another which carried into the right field bleachers at the home field of the Yankees. There wasn't a fluke home run in the eight made here, and the three which he added at Boston last week were tremendous drives that no outfielder could have retrieved on an open field in time to prevent a home run.

A year ago Ruth, with only two home runs to his credit for the early weeks of the season and apparently not on his way to any record-making performance, was rated as a spectacular player and nothing more. Today he stands out as the greatest attraction in the history of the game. Old-timers turn out to see him hit the ball and admit without quibble that they never saw his equal. With him the Yankees loom up as a pennant contender and without him the team would not figure to finish better than fourth. Add to his wonderful hitting ability the fact that he has played every outfield position capably, is a good first baseman and can pitch with the best in the game today, and there is no way of denying him the place of honor at the most valuable ball player the sport has yet produced.

A Great Athletic Meet.

The forty-fourth annual Intercollegiate A. A. A. A. championship meet, which was concluded on Franklin Field Saturday, will go down in collegiate history as one of the greatest ever held. From a competitive standpoint it was all that could be desired. Keen races on the track were produced from beginning to end of the program, and the battles afield, together with the bitter struggle for point supremacy between Penn and Princeton, were of a nature to satisfy the most exacting.

The college athletes, however, failed to vindicate the predictions of their coaches and admirers in the matter of record performances. One record was equalled and later broken when Earl J. Thomson, the phenomenal Dartmouth hurdler, did 14 2-5 seconds in the 120-yard high hurdle race. Previously the big Green sensation had equalled the college record of 15 seconds. In the other events record performances were conspicuous by their absence, albeit the competition was of a nature to sustain interest.

Thomson's world's record in the hurdles, of course, stands out as the greatest feat of the meet. This performance stamped the Hanoverian as the greatest hurdler ever developed. His style is perfection, his method of clearing the fences attaining the acme of hurdling grace, while his speed overshadows that of any of his rivals. It is to be regretted that his Canadian citizenship will deprive America of his services in the Olympic Games.

The showing of Western Athletes revealed the latent strength of the Pacific Coast collegians as Olympic possibilities. Eight bronzed athletes from the Golden Gate competed and three of them carried off titles. But for the revived effect of an injury to Kirksey, it is possible a fourth championship would have been recorded for the Coast, for the Stanford star was one of the two athletes to do "evens" in the century trials.

Pennsylvania's triumph over Princeton reflects accurately the almost equal strength of the Red and Blue team and the Tigers on track and field. Princeton excelled the Quakers in track competitions, but the Red and Blue scored enough points in the field barely to overcome the Tiger advantage on the cinder path. Coach Lawson Robertson has developed a formidable team, and his work in this connection, together with his wide knowledge of and experience with athletes, probably will result in his selection as Olympic trainer.

Share Prosperity of Turf.

With the announcement last week by Major August Belmont of a general increase in the value of purses for the balance of the present meeting at Belmont Park racing took another step toward the goal which those behind the sport have sought for several years. Horsemen are once more able to race for $1,000 purses, this being set as the minimum for the meeting, and this will insure better racing by attracting more performers and of a superior type.

No doubt the other associations which have courses on the metropolitan circuit will soon follow the example of the Westchester Association and raise the value of purses to a like figure. The increase is due to the improved public support of racing. The attendance thus far this year has been far ahead of that of last season and justifies larger purses. The Westchester Association made a creditable move in raising the values and thus sharing profits from the very beginning.

Racing has had a long struggle in New York State, and those who have fought for the sport have had to overcome many obstacles. The purses are to be consistently increased in proportion to the popularity of racing so that the horseman who helped to keep the game alive through its leaner years may be justly rewarded.

This is a further indication that racing is not conducted as a commercial enterprise. The men who act as the promoters do not wish to meet with deficits, as they did through some years, but they are not in racing for the profits derived from it. On the contrary, it is but a recreation which they have tried to put on a self-supporting basis. Members of the Jockey Club look to other sources for revenue.

There are some men in racing, however, who are dependent on purses. These are the owners of horses running in the cheaper races and who look to these for a livelihood. To the owners of the larger stables the size of the purse is of but little consequence and it is the pleasure and honor that they seek. But the men who provide the horses for the cheaper races are just as essential to the success of the sport, for racing could hardly provide a regulation program of events in which only stake horses would perform. The increases have thus been made where they do the most good.

Shamrock Seems Formidable.

Yachtsmen who take a real interest in America's Cup races—and that means all who are worthy of being considered yachtsmen—are greatly puzzled regarding the outcome of the contests which are to take place this Summer off Sandy Hook for the cherished old trophy emblematic of the championship of the seas.

The reason for this is Shamrock IV., the challenging yacht. No one knows just what to make of her. She is a real mystery ship. Mr. Nicholson, her designer, has produced a yacht unlike any other afloat. Possibly he is the only man living who possesses an accurate enough knowledge of the possibilities of all three big sloops (Shamrock IV., Resolute and Vanitie) to be able to form anything like a close idea of how the contender may fare when she meets the selected defender. The clever and radical designer is either very well satisfied with his creation's chances for lifting the cup or he is a clever actor.

During the last week many American as well as Canadian and British yachting sharps have inspected the challenger both while she was on the ways and since she has been afloat. Before seeing and studying her many of them thought she was nothing more than another Shamrock, predoomed to defeat. Now they all admit that she seems certain to give the selected defender a battle royal, and some of the most expert authorities agree that her chances of winning are more than merely good.

She will have to allow time to the defender, no matter whether that craft be Resolute or Vanitie, but will she have to allow as much as was generally believed? That is a question which is puzzling yachtsmen.

Disinterested naval architects who have studied her lines as she rested in her cradle before being launched doubt if she will be penalized anywhere near as much as was generally expected on quarter beam. Her great sail spread will be the thing on which she will be penalized, and, they contend, added sail area means the equivalent of added power, which in turn means added speed. If she can carry that great and lofty spread of canvas she will get the benefit of those light and lofty zephyrs which are prevalent off the Hook during the Summer months, as well as of all the low lying breezes.

Going to windward is considered to be her strong point, though she may prove to be a wonder in other points of sailing as well. It is safe to say that when she meets either the Resolute or Vanitie few experts will care to lay very long odds against her.

This week all three of the glorious big single stickers will be out showing their speed, the two defense candidates off Newport, R. I., while Shamrock IV. will be getting her solitary trials in the westerly end of Long Island Sound while awaiting the arrival of her "trial horse," the twenty-three-meter Shamrock, due to arrive nearly any day now. In another week or so others than Mr. Nicholson will have a good idea of whether the Cup is to remain here or whether Sir Thomas is to be rewarded for his perseverance at last.

Quest for the Davis Cup.

The lawn tennis team which sailed yesterday for England to begin its quest of the Davis Cup carries with it the good wishes and high hopes of all American sportsmen. There is a general conviction that in Champion William M. Johnston, William T. Tilden, 2d., Richard Norris Williams, 2d., and Charles S. Garland the United States is represented by the strongest combination of players available, and one which may easily prove superior to any team of the past entered for the famous international trophy.

The Americans will encounter worthy opposition at the very start in the French team, and if this test is survived England will offer an even more determined resistance on her home courts. In the event of an American victory in the preliminaries there remains the task of overcoming the great Australians in far-off New Zealand next Winter.

Playing in foreign lands, on strange courts and under generally unfamiliar conditions is a vastly different proposition from the average tournament tennis to be encountered at home, and it would be unreasonable to look for a triumphant tour, absolutelyl free from reverses. Yet it is difficult to escape the feeling that the team which sailed yesterday has the material to go through all foreign opposition and bring back the Davis Cup to the country which originally offered it for competition.

Both Johnston and Tilden last Summer defeated the "world's champion," Gerald Patterson, unquestionably the strongest player abroad. Williams is still regarded by Norman Brookes as potentially the greatest of them all, while Garland showed himself close to the best in England at Wimbledon last year, carrying Kingscote to five sets before succumbing in the semi-finals. Johnston and Tilden defeated Brooke and Patterson in doubles, and with serious practice together should make an invincible combination. These two, at top of their form, may be able to turn the trick without any assistance from the other half of the team, as Brookes and Wilding did for Australia and the Doherty brothers for England in the past. But it is too early to risk predictions, and for the present a "bon voyage" and "here's hoping" must be sufficient.

FISCHER DEFEATS ANDERSON AT NET

Supplies Principal Upset of Amackassin Tennis Tourney by Three-Set Victory.

Much good tennis and a few surprises marked the second day of play in the Eastern New York championship at the Arnackassin Club, Yonkers, yesterday, several stars advancing to the fourth round. Among these were the national junior title-holder, Vincent Richards, and the veteran, William M. Fischer, who supplied the big upset of the tournament to date by eliminating young Frank Anderson in a three-set match, scored 6—3, 4—6, 6—1. Donald Keresey attained a parallel bracket by disposing of Alfred Hammett, the chop-stroke artist, in straight sets, and Herbert Bowman pulled out a creditable victory over W. Dickson Cunningham after losing the opener in one-sided fashion.

Another upset came late in the day, when R. S. Stoddart, the former Yale captain, won out in a terrific three-set struggle with Willard Botsford, coming from behind to take the second set at 9—7, and then winning the rubber at 6—3, the same score by which he had lost the opener.

Francis T. Hunter, the present eastern New York champion, Ichiya Kumagae, holder of the Amackassin Challenge Cup; Leonard Beekman, the club champion; Fred C. Anderson, Allen Behr, H. H. Manchester, E. H. Binzen, Leon Croley and Alex Iler were among the other winners of the day.

Kumagae and Hunter meet this morning in one of the holiday feature matches, and other important struggles are scheduled later, with a tennis dinner and dance at the clubhouse in the evening. The women's events will begin tomorrow and the men's doubles on Wednesday.

Fischer's Surprising Victory.

Fischer's victory over Frank Anderson was gained by the steadiest of deep court driving, with an occasional sally to the net when a safe opening presented itself. These tactics kept the youngster consistently away from the barrier, and at the long range game he was not able to hold his own with Fischer, his physical condition being scarcely equal to the strain of a succession of sustained rallies.

The University Heights representative surprised Anderson with the speed of his attack in the opening set, and had put it to his credit at 6—3 before the Brooklyn junior could rally. Good uphill playing of the severest type, however, put Anderson back in the running and squared the match by a 6—4 score. In the rubber Fischer showed the better staying qualities, and as his shots became more and more accurate he forged ahead, to win impressively with the loss of only one more game.

Kumagae, after getting a default from Fred Letson, was not extended in defeating W. A. White at 6—1, 6—2. The Japanese lefthander, fresh from winning his second leg on the Virginia State cup at Norfolk, seemed in first-class form and hit the ball with his customary bewildering speed.

Hunter, the play-through champion, drew a harder assignment in Edward Oelsner of Montclair, former star of the Middle West. The mixture of chops and drives used by the Jerseyman bothered Hunter all through the first set, and it was only by hammering the ball for clean kills that the title-holder came out on top at 6—4. The second session was more one-sided, Hunter's speed and strength counting in his favor after he had solved Oelsner's individual style, and carrying him ahead to a quick decision at 6—2.

Richards Wins Twice.

Richards used his accurate volleying game to win two matches in succession, his victims being Paul Martin and R. H. Marshall. In each case the loser made a good showing in the second set, after being overwhelmed in the first, but the Fordham schoolboy always had a little more ammunition up his sleeve and pulled out safely in the pinches.

The summary:

FIRST ROUND—W. S. Anderson defeated Charles Chambers, 6—1, 7—5; Edward Oelsner defeated J. D. Keyes, 6—1, 6—1; Fred C. Anderson defeated Merritt Cutler, 6—0, 6—3; H. R. Hathaway defeated L. V. Robinson, 6—3, 6—4, 6—3; L. G. French defeated G. Damrau, 6—2, 6—3; George Garbe defeated Charles Schmidt, 6—1, 4—6, 6—4; Elliott H. Binzen defeated R. G. McKay, 7—5, 7—5; Abraham Bassford, Jr., defeated C. B. Stewart, 6—3, 6—1; Willard Botsford defeated J. E. Ackland, 6—1, 6—0; H. L. Bowman defeated R. V. Lake, 6—1, 6—3; M. T. Ackerland defeated F. P. Fuller, 6—2, 6—0; Ichiya Kumagae won from Fred Letson by default; Ingo Hartmann won from J. W. Fox by default; Gerald Emerson defeated Ben Letson, 4—6, 7—5, 6—0; Manfred Goldman won from Paul Keresey by default.

SECOND ROUND—Donald Keresey defeated Milton Soper, 6—1, 7—5; Fred Anderson defeated Harry Sachs, 6—0, 6—1; Frank T. Anderson defeated W. Halsey Wood, 6—3, 6—4; Alex Iler defeated Ely Behar, 6—1, 6—4; R. S. Stoddart defeated Milton Bernstein, 6—3, 6—0; J. D. Ewing defeated Augustin Healy, 2—6, 6—3, 6—4; W. Dickson Cunningham defeated E. H. Henderson, 6—4, 6—1, 6—2; W. S. Anderson won from B. F. Drake, by default; Ichiya Kumagae defeated W. A. White, 6—1, 6—2; A. D. Hammett defeated T. Emmet Reed, 6—0, 6—4; Charles Schmidt defeated E. O. Desnoes, 6—0, 6—1; W. M. Fischer defeated H. W. Schwartz, 6—2, 7—5; Allen Behr defeated L. Stesinger, 7—5, 6—2; G. Garbe defeated K. B. Smith, 2—6, 6—3, 7—5; E. H. Binzen defeated A. L. Bruneau, 6—2, 6—2; Leon Croley defeated Ben Landau, 6—1, 6—2; A. D. Hammett defeated T. Edwards, 6—0, 6—4; Willard Botsford defeated Abraham Bassford, Jr., 6—2, 3—6, 6—2; R. H. Marshall defeated M. Goldman, 6—6, 6—3, 8—6; Vincent Richards defeated Paul Martin, 6—1, 4—6, 7—5; H. L. Bowman won from N. R. Sinclair, by default; H. H. Manchester defeated F. L. McWatty, 6—0, 6—1; F. T. Hunter defeated Edward Oelsner, 6—4, 6—2; Leonard Beekman defeated H. R. Hathaway, 6—2, 6—1; L. G. French defeated Hamniett Norton, 6—3, 1—6, 6—2.

THIRD ROUND—Donald Keresey defeated A. D. Hammett, 6—4, 6—4; H. L. Bowman defeated W. D. Cunningham, 2—6, 6—1, 6—2; W. M. Fischer defeated Frank T. Anderson, 6—3, 4—6, 6—1; Vincent Richards defeated R. H. Marshall, 6—1, 6—1; R. S. Stoddart defeated Willard Botsford, 3—6, 9—7, 6—3.

Thorley Withdraws Candidacy For New Boxing Commission

Charles Thorley, who has been considered one of the leading candidates for appointment to the Boxing Commission under the new Walker law, yesterday announced his withdrawal from the field, because of pressure of private business. Mr. Thorley's friends have been advocating his appointment since the Walker measure passed the Legislature, his long association with the sport as an enthusiast and his wide knowledge of boxing qualifying him for the position. Mr. Thorley, in announcing his withdrawal, declared that his business interests would prevent his giving a Commissioner's office the time and attention required.

DAVIS CUP PLAYERS SAIL FOR ENGLAND

Tennis Team to Enter Its First Tourney Abroad June 14 and Meet France July 8.

The four tennis players composing the American Davis Cup team, National Champion William M. Johnston, William T. Tilden, 2d., Richard Norris Williams, 2d. and Charles S. Garland, accompanied by Captain Samuel Hardy, sailed from Hoboken at 10 o'clock yesterday morning on the U. S. army transport Northern Pacific, due to arrive at Antwerp next Saturday. The party had its passage arranged on the big official steamer through the direct agency of the War Department, and is under the personal charge of Major Gen. Peyton C. March, who is himself an enthusiastic follower of tennis.

The Davis Cup team will proceed directly to London, and the players will enter their first public competition at the Queen's Club on June 14, playing later at Wimbledon in the world's championship tournament, which begins June 21. The first match in the international series will also be played at Wimbledon, beginning July 8, with France as opponent.

In accordance with the ruling of the United States Government, it was impossible for Mrs. Hardy, Mrs. Johnston and Mrs. Williams to accompany their husbands, and they will follow on June 12 on the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria, the boat originally selected for the entire party, but whose delay in sailing made necessary the change in plans.

Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory is already on her way to England, having sailed by the French line on Saturday, but Miss Marion Zinderstein, who also intended to play at Wimbledon, has given up the trip, because of the impossibility of getting sufficient practice abroad to do herself justice in tournament play. Miss Eleanor Goss, who had also planned to join the feminine invasion of the English courts, resigned the project some time ago, when the difficulty of securing accommodations became apparent.

It was announced that in the two English tournaments the American doubles combinations would be Johnston and Tilden and Williams and Garland, and that the same pairing would probably be tried in the first of the Davis Cup matches, in which case the entire burden would fall on the first two players.

END MIXED DOUBLES TILT.

Miss Reckford and M. T. Ackerland Win at White Plains.

The invitation mixed doubles tennis tournament held over the week-end at the Century Country Club, White Plains, was completed yesterday, the winners being Miss Reckford and M. T. Ackerland, who scored over Mrs. Halle and Manfred Goldman in the final round in straight sets, 6—2, 6—4.

Both of the men had taken part in singles matches at the Amackassin Club, Yonkers, earlier in the afternoon, but showed good form nevertheless, and ran the necessary distance for adequate court-covering in spirited and enthusiastic fashion.

RESOLUTE IN FAST TRIAL OFF BRISTOL

Special to The New York Times.

BRISTOL, R. I., May 30.—After a two-hour spin with all racing sails set this forenoon in upper Narragansett Bay, the cup craft Resolute returned to her anchorage off the Herreshoff boat shops at noon and was stripped of her sails for the rest of the day. Manager Robert W. Emmons, 2d., Charles Francis Adams, 2d., the amateur captain, and George J. Cormack, Secretary of the New York Yacht Club, motored to Boston, to remain until tomorrow. The crew, which has been kept at energetic work every day for a week preparing the Resolute for her next meeting with the Vanitie, was given a much appreciated afternoon off.

Starting out from Bristol Harbor in an easterly wind with a ten-mile an hour velocity, the sloop eased her sheets and set a club topsail. After going into the wind, tacking, jibing and sailing on a reach, the yacht was heading back into Bristol Harvor when she fell in with a new wind from the southwest. The change necessitated the stripping of sail.

The first puffs of the southwester hit hard, disrupting the mainsail leech to such an extent that when the yacht came to anchor the mainsail was rolled up and taken ashore for recutting. It will probably be used in the trial races.

The Resolute is now in as fine trim as in her contests in 1914 and 1915, and shows additional speed.

When the Resolute leaves here next Wednesday for Newport she will be ready for measuring.

Gobert and Laurentz Victors in International Tennis at Paris.

PARIS, May 30.—André H. Gobert and William H. Laurentz, of the French Davis Cup team, today won the international men's doubles tennis championship in straight sets. The score was, 6—4, 6—2, 6—1. Their opponents were Nicholas Mishu of Rumania and Blackbeard, the nineteen-year-old South African player, whose remarkable game has thrilled the experts.

In the women's games, Miss Holman, British, won the finals in the ladies' championship singles, from Señorita Subirana in straight sets, 6—0, 7—5.

Mme. Golding and M. Laurentz, France, won the mixed doubles championship by default. Mlle. Amblard was injured and unable to play with her partner, Max Decugis.

Wins A. A. U. Handball Title.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 30.—Max Gold of the Los Angeles Athletic Club is the A. A. U. national handball singles champion. Gold defeated George Klawitter of the same club in two straight games, 21—7 and 21—5, in the finals of the tournament which have been in progress for the last week.

SHACKAMAXON GOLF CLUB TAKES MATCH

The Richmond County Club's golf team ran against a snag yesterday at Westfield, N. J., where it essayed the task of defeating in a team match the Shackamaxon Country Club. For a novelty, the score was close enough to be exciting. Shackamaxon, benefited by knowledge of its home links, won, 21 points to 18, scored on the Nassau system, but only after experiencing a decided fright in the foursomes played in the afternoon.

SHACKAMAXON.		RICHMOND COUNTY.
H. C. Buchanan	0	A. L. Walker, Jr.	1

EQUITY CANDIDATES BITTER IN DEBATE

TWO CAMPS CHEER AND HISS

In the presence of about two thousand excited members of the Actors' Equity Association, John Emerson and Wilton Lackaye, rival candidates for the Presidency of the organization, debated the campaign issues yesterday afternoon at the Hotel Astor. The presidential race, which will end with the election next Friday, has divided the Equity sharply into two camps. Various statements of the two speakers were branded as lies by their opponents. The meeting, which came as the climax of a bitter campaign, threatened on several occasions to become unmanageable.

Mr. Emerson is the candidate on the regular ticket to succeed Francis Wilson. Mr. Lackaye, after refusing the nomination for the Vice Presidency on the regular ticket, has been conducting his own campaign on the basis of the alleged mismanagement of Equity affairs.

Mr. Lackaye charged that the Equity is controlled by "a sinister influence, an invisible government, a hidden hand," and intimated that the organization was being run more in the interests of the managers than of the Equity. He criticised the method of arbitration, declaring that it gave the manager an advantage, and cited several specific instances in support of his contentions. He spoke also of an alleged address made by Mr. Emerson during the strike in which the latter spoke in kindly vein of George M. Cohan, and said:

"Mr. Cohan is the man who was willing to give $100,000 to wreck you. He is a Fido, and he is my enemy and yours."

Mr. Emerson in replying declared that "most of these criticisms were based upon unfounded rumor and the rest upon Mr. Lackaye's appalling ignorance." Mr. Lackaye, he declared, had been a member of the Equity Council during the first two years of the organization's life and that during that time he had attended only three meetings, although meetings were held every week. He said that William A. Brady in talking to a group of actors a few weeks ago had said: "Just wait until Lackaye gets in and then we'll have you where we want you." To this Mr. Lackaye replied that his last association with Mr. Brady had resulted in a lawsuit.

MORRIS GEST IN STEERAGE.

But for the thoughtfulness of Captain Jan Baron of the Rotterdam of the Holland-America Line which docked yesterday, Morris Gest, theatrical producer, and William A. Page, his business manager, would have made the voyage as steerage passengers. Gest and Page had reservations on another steamer which was held up by a strike, and rather than wait over they decided to come by steerage, which was all the accommodations they could get on the Rotterdam.

When the steamer was one day out their presence was discovered by Captain Baron, who invited them to share his stateroom for the remainder of the trip. Gest went to Europe in search of new plays, and to try to arrange to bring his father and mother from Odessa to the United States. He said he tried unsuccessfully to enter Russia by several routes.

Just before he left London to start for home, Mr. Gest said Lady Astor promised to aid him in reaching his parents. She informed him that Parliament was soon to send a mission to Russia and that she would ask them to communicate if possible with the mother and father, arranging to send them to America.

Regarding his theatrical interests on the other side, Mr. Gest said he expected to stage "Aphrodite" in London.

The Rotterdam brought 480 first cabin and 382 second cabin passengers. This is the steamer's first trip in four months, having been tied up because of the dock strikes in Holland.

TO SING "NATOMA" ABROAD.

American Company Plans for Paris Fall Season.

Plans for a Fall opera season in Paris, to be financed by an American, and to include one American opera sung in English by artists from this country, were announced yesterday by A. J. Davis, a copper mine owner of Colorado, who lives in this city at 45 West Forty-seventh Street. Mr. Davis and a nephew in Paris have contracted with international stars, some of whom sailed on the liner France yesterday, to appear in September and October at the Theatre Champs Elysees, where a foreign engagement was once played by the Metropolitan.

The American opera chosen is "Natoma," which Joseph Redding and Victor Herbert wrote for Oscar Hammerstein, and which was produced by the Manhattan Impresario's successor in 1911 in Philadelphia and New York. Mary Garden is again expected to sing the Indian title rôle, with possibly Colin O'More, of the "Lassie" company, in the tenor part of Paul Merrill, created at the Metropolitan by John McCormack.

The New York Grand Opera Company, as Mr. Davis's Paris organization is to be known, it was said, will include also Rosa Raisa, Maria Barrientos, Titta Ruffo, Theodore Chaliapine and others, while among its proposed productions are Montemezzi's "La Nave" and "Love of Three Kings," as well as "I Sinzari" and "Edipo Re," by Leon Cavallo.

OPEN $1,000,000 HOME.

Daughters of Jacob Give Dinner Preceding Dedication.

The new $1,000,000 building of the Home of the Daughters of Jacob, an organization caring for aged and infirm couples, was formally opened last night at Findlay and Teller Avenues, the Bronx. The structure will accommodate about 500 persons.

Preceding the dedication, about 300 guests attended a dinner, A. L. Lamport presiding. Bird S. Coler, Commissioner of Charities, the first speaker, attacked research work in hospitals and institutions, terming it "pure bunk." He also criticised the Red Cross Christmas stamp sale, asserting that practically all of the funds thus obtained were expended for administrative expenses.

Judge Otto A. Rosalsky, who was in charge of the committee that raised the money for the building, described the work and paid special tribute to Mrs. A. J. Dworsky, who, with eight other women, founded the organization in 1890 at 60 Gouverneur Street. Felix M. Warburg, Chairman of the Joint Distribution Committee, discussing the new home, said it was a "perfectly marvelous improvement in institutional building."

THE SCREEN

The Criterion Theatre, which opened five weeks ago as a motion-picture house, with Cecil B. DeMille's "Why Change Your Wife?" presented its second program for an indefinite run yesterday afternoon. The feature of the new bill is "Humoresque," an adaptation by Frances Marion of Fannie Hurst's story of the same name, directed by Frank Borzage.

Many, no doubt, are familiar with Miss Hurst's story, and, presumably, the photoplay follows its original in the main. At any rate, the picture begins in New York's lower east side, familiarly known, in popular fiction and provincial parlance, as the Ghetto. The first part of it is steeped in atmosphere, if that overworked word may again be called upon to explain that in a succession of scenes, broad street views and little intimate glimpses, the people of the story, their customs, habits, ways of living and variety of character and appearance, are brought to the screen, definitely, genuinely, memorably. Within a short time the spectator feels himself carried into the life of which the persons in the play are an integral part. The power of the motion picture thus to create atmosphere, more vividly, more convincingly, than is possible in written words, except those of rare masters, is not often so emphatically and delightfully demonstrated.

For this, of course, first credit goes to the camera, but the machine would be of no use without its director and his associates, so to Mr. Borzage, Miss Marion and others must go praise. They, however, would have achieved little without competent players, and it is, therefore, to Vera Gordon as a Jewish mother, Dore Davidson as her husband, little Bobby Connelly as their son, Sidney Carlyle as a pathetic imbecile, and many others that no little credit must be given. In an excellent cast, Vera Gordon is conspicuous by her performance. She is the most genuine person in the story, seemingly a character from life, living. The others are the less alive only by comparison with her.

These people, as they are in the first part of the picture, are the substance of the photoplay. They are a human family, mother and father, with numerous children, whose joys and troubles are mingled as they are, without doubt, in many homes. The chief reason for their being in a story is Leon Kantor, the little son who wants a violin for a birthday present and thereby convinces his mother that he is a musical genius. He gets the violin and becomes a genius, and from this point the story loses much of its character, becomes more conventional, and follows a usual course of fiction to a predetermined end. Now and then there are flashes of its early spirit, but for the most part, once all of the children are grown, and the family has moved uptown, the romance is not distinguished by its quality from many, many others. In the latter half of the narrative the heroine is Alma Rubens, and although her name is featured in the program, she has comparatively little to do. Vera Gordon remains the actual star of the work throughout. Gaston Glass, as Leon Kantor matured, is satisfactory.

The "Humoresque" is preceded by interesting views of the Palestine of today, which dissolve, so to speak, into the singing of "Through the Ages" by Emanuel List and a chorus costumed as pilgrims. The whole is effective.

Assume that two men may look so much alike that the mother of one of them believes the other to be her son; assume further that, although one is an English Earl and the other an American named Jones, any differences they may have in speech and penmanship pass unnoticed by all with whom they come into contact; assume, also, that the American may be thrown into the shoes of the Englishman without knowing the slightest thing about his life and history, and then, when all these and other assumptions have been made, you are prepared to see the pictured story of "The Man Who Lost Himself," which is at the Strand this week. Any one disposed to make the necessary assumptions may, and undoubtedly will, enjoy the photoplay, for the two leading rôles are played by William Faversham with unfailing pantomimic ability and sureness of characterization. Also, Mr. Faversham, whose rôle in "The Silver King," his previous picture, was entirely serious, reveals a distinctive talent for screen comedy in his present performance. His supporting cast is competent, especially Hedda Hopper, and Clarence G. Badger, who directed the production, has done, on the whole, a creditable piece of work. The picture is based on a story by H. de Vere Stacpole.

"Dollars and Sense," with Madge Kennedy, was announced as among the offerings at the Strand this week, but it is not among those present, having apparently been withdrawn at the last minute. The program includes, however, one of Max Fleischer's unique "Out of the Inkwell" cartoons and "A Gold Star Pilgrimage," by Burton Holmes, shown at the request of the Committee for Devastated France.

GREEK TROOPS ENTER THRACE

PUT GUARDS AGAINST TURKS

Latter Express Resentment That Movement Has Begun Before They Act on the Treaty.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 29.—Greek troops began the occupation of Bulgarian Thrace on Friday, and the first trainload has arrived at a point opposite Adrianople.

M. Canellopoulos, the Greek High Commissioner at Constantinople, says the occupation so far has been without incident. He added that Bulgarians had made representations to the French that they had suffered indignities at the hands of the Greeks, but that the French commandant declared the complaints were unfounded.

M. Canellopoulos stated that he did not know whether occupation of Turkish Thrace would be carried out at once. Surprise was expressed by Turkish officials that the occupation had begun prior to formal action on the peace treaty with Turkey. The Greeks have not yet entered Turkish Thrace, but are on the outskirts of Adrianople.

ATHENS, Greece, May 29.—Greek troops have occupied Dedeagatch and Gumurjina, according to an official communiqué issued today. The communiqué adds:

"A considerable force of covering troops has been sent toward the Bulgarian frontier. Troops proceeding to Kerdjali encountered Comitadjis and Bulgarian regulars. One Bulgarian soldier was taken prisoner and another slightly wounded. A subaltern was slightly wounded.

An official communication issued later says that Greek occupation of Thrace is proceeding normally.

The railroad and the towns of Seredjak, Soufli and Dimotika were taken over without untoward events. A Greek rear guard is protecting the Bulgarian frontier. The dispatch adds that the Greek army has been received enthusiastically.

BATHING SUIT RULE ENFORCED AT BEACH

The men and women censors of bathing costumes at Coney Island had a busy time yesterday afternoon with 5,000 or more bathers who came under their observation. The censors were on the lookout principally for women bathers wearing socks and men with one-piece bathing suits. Despite the warning of Captain Byron Sackett of the Coney Island Police Station, that socks were tabooed as well as the one-piece suit there were a few who "took a chance." They were spotted by the censors and given an opportunity to change their costume or "tell it to the Judge in the morning." They all elected to adopt the former course.

It was estimated by the police that more than 200,000 men, women and children spent part of the day at Coney Island, a record for this season.

There were 160 extra policemen on duty at Coney Island, in addition to the fifteen plain clothes censors of bathing costumes. Twenty-five arrests of crapshooters were made, and summonses were served on thirty-five persons for playing baseball either on the beach or the streets near the beach.

The Rockaways had the biggest crowd of the season.

South Beach and Midland Beach were to have opened for the season yesterday. South Beach did open and there was a big crowd of pleasure seekers there all day; but Midland Beach did not open—that is, nobody went there—owing to the lack of transportation.

James Calvino, 13 years of age, of 131 First Street, Manhattan, was rescued from drowning during the afternoon while in bathing in Durkee's Pond, at Grassmere.

MUSIC NOTES.

The New York Symphony Orchestra, closing its Italian journey at Milan on Memorial Day, was to return to France June 1, playing at Strasbourg, Metz and Fontainebleau.

E. Robert Schintz, the French pianist, sailed on the France yesterday for home, taking with him music of American composers that he hopes to introduce in Paris.

Frieda Hempel, after singing at the Norfolk Festival this week, will sail June 10 on the Rotterdam to spend the Summer in England, France and Switzerland.

Vasa Prihoda, a young Bohemian violinist from Prague, who played last year in Italy, is announced for an American tour directed by Fortune Gallo.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Holiday matinees will be given today in all theatres.

Grace Valentine will have the title role in "The Cave Girl," the Middleton-Bolton comedy soon to be tried out.

In the cast of the new Ziegfeld "Follies" will be Fannie Brice, Bernard Granville, John Steel, Mary Eaton, W. C. Fields, Charles Winninger, Van and Schenck, Jack Donohue, Carl Randall, Ray Dooley, Delyle Alda, Moran and Mack, Jerome and Herbert, Lillian Broderick, Eddie Dowling, Olive Cornell, Doris Eaton, Florence Ware, Jane Carroll, Jessie Reed, and Olive Vaughn. The first performance will take place in Atlantic City on Tuesday, June 15, and the New York opening at the New Amsterdam Theatre the following Monday.

"The Wonderful Thing" closed at the Playhouse on Saturday.

"The Reckoning," by Marjorie Chase, has been accepted by A. H. Woods.

"Borderland," by Porter Emerson Browne, will be produced in Atlantic City next Monday night by William Harris. Holbrook Blinn will head the cast.

A group of players under the direction of Henry Stillman of the Theatre Guild will give four performances of a new play called "Nightshade" at the Garrick Theatre next week. They will be given on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday afternoons.

BUILDING PROGRAM GETTING UNDER WAY

Space Demand Begins to Slacken for Residences and Business Needs.

NOT ENOUGH MATERIALS

Construction Work Projected for 1920-21 Will Tax Output of Mills.

Scarcity of building materials is exercising an unexpected influence upon the demand for residence and commercial space in this market.

Real estate men sensitively in touch with the economics of this market have discovered in the unprecedented dearth of building materials an unexpected influence upon the demand for rentable space of all kinds.

The Knickerbocker and Manhattan Hotels found themselves in demand as prospective commercial structures because the 1920-21 requirements for building materials for new buildings are already nearing the visible capacity of Eastern manufacturers to supply.

Those who otherwise would be operative builders have circumvented the conditions that are for the moment barring speculative builders from the market, by this simple process of buying up existing residential structures to alter them into commercial units.

This sort of speculation has been surprisingly general. Much less material is required, contractors have been much less timid about making estimates on this sort of building work, and there has been a ready sales market for space in these remodeled buildings, covering long leaseholds at good profit-taking rates.

In suburban markets the demand for already-constructed homes is slackening because it is becoming apparent that building material prices are destined to continue toward higher levels at least for the remainder of this year. No one can now tell when the peak will be reached. Practically only five months remain in which to produce materials enough to supply the greatest volume of building ever recorded for the metropolitan district of New York.

Labor at the building material plant is drifting cityward, even though record wage arrangements are offered. The shutting down of some of the so-called luxury industries is giving the manufacturer more men with which to operate his plant, but the householder who recently was forced to buy his home is not now so sure about the continuity of his position.

He paid down the lowest possible amount to purchase the house in the possibility of enforced foreclosures this year as luxury trades reduce activities. The prospective builder of today is inclined to postpone his plans for speculative construction work. Building material prices, he finds, are too high to warrant general speculative construction in a Presidential election campaign year.

New York building material dealers' yards are still bare of supplies, according to the Dow Service Daily Building Reports. There are no price changes this week, but great pressure was put upon common brick at $25 a thousand, wholesale, with the usual additional charges for handling and hauling and 15 per cent. for delivery, in spite of the walkout of the sand truck chauffeurs, which, however, was settled at noon Friday.

Some cement is trickling into the market from Hudson River plants, but it is going into actual construction as fast as it is being received. The rails are not showing much improvement in getting materials into New York, but considerable progress was expected over the holiday.

Several conditions in the general building material market have developed which accounts for the continued strength of the retail building material prices. In the first place, the consignee is paying all the war taxes, which amount to $3 or $4 on a carload of building materials.

Trucking costs are about $1.20 a barrel on building materials in wood when trucked from distances like New Brunswick, Plainfield, White Plains or Perth Amboy. Trucks have been bringing material in from as far away as York, Pa., and it is a frequent occurrance to find cement being brought into this market direct by trucks from the Pennsylvania cement mills.

One of the newest angles of the retail price situation is the fact that some of this cement is being sent in gondola cars over which a tarpaulin structure is built. The dealer is obliged to assume responsibility to the extent of $100 for this structure.

When the car arrives at destination the consignee has to take down the structure of tarpaulin and return it to the company supplying this covering, whereupon a rebate of $80 is given to the dealer if the tarpaulin is undamaged. This represents approximately 5 cents a barrel more on the cement or other building materials contained in the car.

Delayed deliveries are notable in the market, evidence being shown that terra cotta block ordered on Jan. 3 was received on May 27. Of four carloads of lath bought in Canada on Dec. 26, 1919, the first car was received in this city on May 21. An order was placed on Feb. 19 for cement, which has not yet been delivered.

HEADS JOURNALISM SCHOOL.

Dr. John W. Cunliffe, a member of the faculty of the Columbia University School of Journalism since 1912, has been appointed director of the school, to succeed Dr. Talcott Williams, the school's first director, according to an announcement last night by Frank D. Fackenthal, Secretary of the university.

Dr. Cunliffe has been associate director and Professor of English at the school since it was established in 1912 by the benefaction of Joseph Pulitzer. Since the retirement of Dr. Williams a year ago Professor Cunliffe has been acting director.

Dr. Cunliffe comes of a British newspaper family. He was born in Bolton, Lancashire, in 1865, and began his work in journalism at 16 on the local evening paper owned by his father. He matriculated at the University of London and took his B. A. degree at the age of 19. He won the Shakespearean scholarship at Owens College, now the University of Manchester, and gained an M. A. at the University of London in classics in 1886 and the M. A. in modern languages in 1888. In 1892 he obtained the degree of Doctor of Literature.

LIBRARIANS TO BEGIN WORK.

Active efforts in the intensive appeal of the American Library Association and the Immigrant Publication Society by which it is hoped to raise New York City's quota of $260,000 toward the $2,000,000 fund to be used in providing "books for everybody," will be begun tomorrow morning by more than 200 librarians of the public and special libraries throughout the city. A citizens' committee of seventy-six, of which Raymond B. Fosdick is chairman, is cooperating with the librarians, and headquarters have been opened at 24 West 39th Street.

The librarians and library trustees hope to raise the fund through the generosity of friends of the library without having recourse to an intensive drive such as has been adopted in other campaigns to raise funds for worthy purposes.

HUNTS HARVESTERS HERE.

Kansas Man Visits Ellis Island, Looking for Farm Laborers.

Laborers are greatly needed in the wheat sections of the country, where the prevailing daily wage is from $5 to $7, according to George W. Rigby, a wheat grower of Concordia, Kan., who visited Ellis Island yesterday with a view of obtaining men for his fields. He said he could place 600 immigrants in his region.

"The people do not realize the danger that lies in the way of harvesting the wheat crop of the West," Mr. Rigby said. "The labor situation with the harvest coming on next month is serious. We will not come up to the bumper crop of last year, when Kansas yielded 143,000,000 bushels, but the estimate for the 1920 crop is 110,000,000 bushels, and it is going to require many more laborers than are available."

Mr. Rigby believed some way should be devised to switch immigration from the cities to agricultural regions.

Fifth Av. Bus Tips Over; 2 Hurt.

Raymond Prettyman, 3,301 Broadway, and Harry Salzman, 20 years old, of 325 East 119th Street, the only passengers on a Fifth Avenue bus, were both injured when the bus tipped over at Broadway and 127th Street early yesterday morning, throwing them to the sidewalk. The bus, operated by Michael O'Grady, struck the curb in coming to a stop and was overbalanced. O'Grady was only slightly hurt. Prettyman received contusions of the right knee and hip, and Salzman's side was bruised and some of his ribs probably fractured. Salzman was taken to the hospital, while Prettyman went home.

Day Off for "Flying Squadron."

With virtually all the store and markets closed today the agents of the Department of Justice "Flying Squadron" will have a day off, it was announced last night by Special Agent J. J. Price, who is in charge of the detachment assigned by Chief Armin W. Riley to go after food profiteers. Tomorrow morning the squad detailed to this work will begin a more systematic canvass of the city to see that the retailers give the consumers the benefit of the decreased wholesale prices.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—Pressure is high on the Middle and North Atlantic Coasts and on the North Pacific Coast and is rising in the extreme Northwest. It is quite low in the Central Plains States, the Central Rocky Mountain, the Middle Plateau and the Southwest, being lowest over Colorado. There were light local rains in the North Pacific States, Montana, Northern Wyoming, the Dakotas and Northern Minnesota, and thundershowers in Southern Missouri, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Kentucky, Tennessee and the East Gulf States and Southeastern Texas. Elsewhere the weather was fair.

Temperatures were generally higher except near the New England and Middle Atlantic Coasts and in the northweht, where it is considerably cooler. There will be local showers Monday in West Virginia, the east portions of Kentucky and Tennessee, Southern Virginia and the South Atlantic and East Gulf States, followed by generally fair weather Tuesday except along the South Atlantic Coast. In the Lower Ohio Valley, Western Tennessee, the Middle Atlantic States, New England and the lake region, the weather will be generally fair Monday and Tuesday, except in the upper lake region, where showers are probable Tuesday, with lower temperatures.

Winds off the Atlantic Coast—North of Sandy Hook, Sandy Hook to Hatteras moderate, mostly southeast, fair; Hatteras to Florida Straits, moderate northeast and east, generally fair; East Gulf, gentle shifting, partly cloudy, probably showers Monday in north portion.

FORECASTS FOR TODAY AND TUESDAY.

3 A. M.	55	74	4 P. M.	71	86
6 A. M.	59	71	6 P. M.	68	86
9 A. M.	66	68	9 P. M.	60	76
12 M.	74	80	11 P. M.	58	77

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 65; for the corresponding date last year it was 78; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years 73.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 64, at 8 P. M. it was 63. Maximum temperature 74 degrees at noon, minimum 56 degrees at 1 A. M. Humidity 57 per cent. at 8 A. M., 50 per cent. at 8 P. M.

The barometer at 8 A. M. yesterday registered 30.17 inches; at 8 P. M. it stood at 30.17 inches.

LEGAL ADVERTISEMENTS.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR the Southern District of New York—PENNSYLVANIA CEMENT COMPANY, Complainant, against BRADLEY CONTRACTING COMPANY, Respondent—In Equity 15-251.—Order to Show Cause to Pass Receiver's Intermediate Report and for Instructions.

The receivers having filed the annexed petition, duly verified the 21st day of May, 1920, praying for the following instructions:

1. The disposition of the moneys now in their hands.

2. The advisability of paying or reducing certain mortgages now existing against the real property in the possession of the receivers.

3. The advisability of paying the preferred claims filed against this estate.

4. The duty of the receivers in connection with any taxes payable to the United States Government, the State of New York or any other taxes for which the receivers or this estate may be liable.

5. The future conduct of the receivership and the affairs of the respondent, and

Why the Court should not make ad interim allowances to the receivers and their counsel, the Special Master, and such other counsel who may apply for an allowance for services rendered to this estate, and a final allowance to the estate of George C. DeLacy, deceased, one of the former receivers herein, and

For the declaration of a dividend to creditors, and

For the approval by the Court and the creditors of the receivers' administration of the estate of this respondent, and for such other and further relief and instructions as to the Court may seem just and proper.

And I do further order that the Collector of Internal Revenue for the Second District of New York, or any duly constituted authority who may be charged by law with the ascertainment and collection of any taxes under the Laws of the United States, and the Comptroller of the State of New York or any duly constituted authority who may be charged by law with the ascertainment and collection of any tax under the Laws of the State of New York, show cause before me at the time and place herein stated as to any claims that the United States of America or the State of New York may have against the estate of this respondent or the receivers herein by reason of any income or property received by said receivers as set forth in the annexed petition.

Service of a copy of this order and of the annexed petition on all creditors who have filed claims with the receivers herein, or on their attorneys, by mailing a copy thereof to said creditors or their respective attorneys on or before the 24th day of May, 1920, shall be deemed good and sufficient service.

Delivery of a copy of this order and the annexed petition on the United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York, and the Collector of Internal Revenue for the Second District of New York, and the Commissioner of the Treasury Department, Internal Revenue, Washington, D. C., and on the Comptroller of the State of New York, and on the Attorney General for the State of New York, on or before the 24th day of May, 1920, shall be deemed good and sufficient service.

The mailing of a copy of this order and a copy of the annexed petition to the holders of the mortgages on the real property in the possession of the receivers or on the attorneys or agents for said mortgagee in or before the 24th day of May, 1920, shall be deemed good and sufficient service.

Let a copy of this order be published in the New York Times on the 24th and 31st days of May, 1920.

Dated, New York, May 21st, 1920.

USE JUDGMENT IN SELECTING YOUR INVESTMENTS

EXPERTS are of the opinion that bonds of real intrinsic merit purchased around present prices are practically certain to sell considerably higher within the next few years. The question, therefore, is not so much whether you should buy now, as it is that you use the proper amount of judgment in making selections. Should you wish us to submit to you a list of diversified investments, we would be glad to do so, following out your ideas as to type and geographical location as closely as possible.

FINANCIAL SITUATION

The financial markets realized last week that if pessimism had not been overdone before at least there were numerous constructive factors arisen to combat those of adverse nature. In stocks a resumption of buying among the railroad issues, together with a substantial improvement of railroad bonds, betokened a transfer of speculative interest from portions of the industrial list whose future remains involved with commercial liquidation. At that, gains of many industrial stocks showed forth an impression that manufacturing profits were not going by the board in the readjustment of commodity prices to the credit situation and the new psychology of the consuming public. Reports of price cutting, cancellations of wholesale orders and part-time operations in numerous factory localities lost their potency of the preceding week to depress stock quotations. Probably a portion of the 3½ point advance in the average price of stocks represented short covering, but something more than the process of realizing profits was under way from Tuesday on. Indications that current haste in sales of goods would later tend to emphasize shortages of the same goods unless production could be stimulated in miraculous fashion were referred to and reiterated as the days passed. It was in railroad stocks, however, that the more obvious signs of effort toward recovery were discerned and for this developments at Washington had the credit. Figures on railway valuation presented before the Interstate Commerce Commission showed that an average number of companies were carrying their property account at totals not only a great deal less than current replacement costs would be, but frequently lower than the Government's own investigators had calculated values as of 1914. The importance of this situation from the point of view of railway companies and security holders would be difficult to overestimate. If the railroads of the country are found to be worth more nearly $25,000,000,000 than $20,000,000,000, as old estimates provide, a satisfactory income basis under provisions of the Transportation act may easily be imagined.

So substantial a recovery as Liberty bonds experienced during the week indicated both a lessening of selling pressure and an improvement of investment demand. The First 4s advanced 3.80, the Second 4s 3.24, the Third 4¼s 3.00, the Fourth 4¼s 3.32 and the Second 4¼s 1.38. For one thing the urgent selling of the preceding week by corporations in need of funds declined decidedly. But as the actual volume of dealings continued much in excess of the average of April it seemed as though a heavy flow of fresh purchases had been attracted by the 5 to 6¼ per cent. interest return on bonds held to maturity.

The decision by the New York Federal Reserve Bank to increase discount rates on Saturday was primarily a response to going rates of credit in the open market. The marking up of the commercial bill rate from 6 to 7 per cent. might be considered so abrupt and drastic a movement as to reflect untoward events in the credit field, but with the open market rate on the same paper 7⅛ to 7¾ per cent. the change was entirely logical. It is not to be denied, however, that the new rates presage higher costs for mercantile and industrial borrowing, and it is to be considered an important addition to the measures being employed to conserve the use of credit.

Railroad transportation still leaves much to be accomplished before full utility of existing rolling stock can be attained, saying nothing of the urgent need of new equipment. The allocation of freight cars to particular localities and the arbitrary routing of traffic under orders of the Interstate Commerce Commission which went into effect in a broad way last week began to have results in breaking congestion in the grain centres, and steel trade reports showed some relief in several leading producing areas. Doubtless the current week will show further results, and it seems likely that an early decision by the Labor Board on applications for wage increases will bring fruit in an improved morale of railway workers. These factors are emphasized because it seems improbable that the earliest application of the $125,000,000 fund for new equipment at the direction of the Commerce Commission can appreciably increase the number of new cars before the crop movement of midsummer is well under way.

So extensive an improvement as that of last week in the European exchanges indicates influences at work of a more stable sort than mere speculation. The rise of sterling, amounting to more than 8 cents to the pound to 3.92¾ for sight drafts, was attributable in part to the receipt of $22,000,000 gold at San Francisco for account of the British Government. But this transfer of treasure in process of accumulating balances against the Anglo-French loan maturity could have had slight reflection, if any, in the strong advance of French, Belgian and Italian rates and no discernible influence upon the exchanges of the Central European countries. The outstanding feature of dealings was the progress made by German, Austrian, Rumanian, Polish and other rates, which was not attributable to any alteration of a changing sentiment over the industrial and agricultural outlook across the sea. Heavy purchases of German and other municipal bonds, together with appreciable expansion in buying of industrial and public utility securities in the United States and England, were factors in increasing the demand for the exchanges. It is rather early to determine percentages of improved conditions in the countries impoverished by war, yet it seems as though something may be deduced from the fact that our exports to Germany increased $2,500,000 in April over March, coincident with substantial declines in the movement to England and France. The Continental countries are buying raw material abroad to the extent their facilities for payment permit, and the feeling grows that in a few months their exports will show conclusively that they are gradually recovering. In view of evidences of recuperation it would appear that an easement in the credit situation in this country would quickly stimulate the extension of commercial credits for European buyers in the United States.

Commodity Prices and Security Values

The effect of declining commodity prices on security values is a matter which investors should carefully consider.

Under the conditions facing us securities of conservatively capitalized public utility companies are among the most desirable investments. Gross earnings of such companies are relatively stable, and with no large inventories to mark down every addition to the purchasing power of the dollar will increase the margin of profit through reduction of operating expenses.

SUBSTITUTES FOR PETROLEUM

There are possible substitutes for some petroleum products, but not for a whole barrel of oil; furthermore, petroleum is the cheapest material, speaking quantitatively, from which liquid fuels and lubricants can be made. Alcohol can be substituted for gasoline, but only in limited quantity; also benzol from by-product coking ovens, but this supply is totally inadequate. For kerosene no quantitative substitute is known. Lubricants can be obtained from animal and vegetable fats, but not in quantity. Fuel oil can be largely supplanted by coal, but for the internal combustion engine there is no quantitative substitute.

The world has ventured on a great oil program, and the conversion to oil is going on to such an extent that there is no turning back. The bridges are burned behind. We must have oil.

YOKOHAMA SILK MART IS SUSPENDED AGAIN

Run on Banks Having Dealings With Overstocked Industry Continues in Japan.

TOKIO, May 28.—Continued heavy withdrawals by depositors in the provinces from banks which have dealings with the raw silk interests were reported today. Too small banks at Yokohama, the naval construction centre on Tokio Bay, suspended.

An attempt was made yesterday to reopen the Yokohoma Silk Exchange, but with the supply increasing and with foreign demand virtually at a standstill, prices declined sharply and business was again suspended.

The raw silk dealers have decided to reduce production. The habutai dealers have asked for Government aid. The price of cotton yarn continued to fall today.

Consul to Advise on Grecian Trade.

The Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce announced yesterday that Consul General Alexander D. Weddell, who has arrived in this country from Athens, Greece, will be glad to advise with any one interested in American-Grecian trade tomorrow, Wednesday and Thursday, at the bureau's New York office, Room 734, Custom House, where he is making his headquarters while in New York City.

CAVE LOSES HIS SEAT.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., May 30.—William Cave, Minister of Shipping in the Newfoundland Government, is deprived of his legislative seat by a decision of the Supreme Court, handed down yesterday, in the contested election at Bay de Verde. The court found that he did not receive a majority of the votes legally cast.

It was ruled that Albert Hickman, Minister of Militia in the late Government, obtained a majority over Cave, but that because he had been guilty of corrupt practices in connection with the election he was not entitled to the seat. A vacancy, therefore, was declared, and the seat will be filled at a special election.

SAYS PACKERS LAY BURDEN ON PUBLIC

LABOR COST BUT 5 PER CENT.

Meat Products, Economist Declares, Rose 100 Per Cent. in Value—Profits Up to 400 Per Cent.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—"In this present period of high prices and profiteering, one-sixth of the income of the average consumer goes for products controlled either directly or indirectly by the big packing interests," was the assertion of W. Jett Lauck, consulting economist for the railroad labor organizations, in a survey of alleged profiteering in the packing industry submitted to the United States Railroad Labor Board and made public here today.

"The average American family," asserted Mr. Lauck, "has been contributing during and since the war period from $300 to $500 a year to swell the gross returns of the Big Five meat packers, namely, the Swift, Armour, Morris, Wilson and Cudahy Companies.

"While wages paid by these concerns increased 75 per cent. and the value of products only 100 per cent., the profits increased 300 to 400 per cent., not only in dollars but also in rates of return on investment, during and since the war.

"The precise amount which the rapacity of these big interests is costing the American public is not ascertainable, but they now have under their control meat products, poultry, fish, eggs, milk, butter, cheese, canned vegetables, canned fruits, canned fish, cottonseed oil, soap, leather, sugar, and other necessaries of daily life, while their grip is fastening upon cereals, vegetables and groceries. Moreover, the Big Five stand in real financial relationship with 700-odd corporations, whose extortionate profiteering has contributed largely to the present financial distress among the working people of the nation.

Sees $58,000,000 Annual War Profit.

"According to their own published figures, the Big Five between 1912 and 1918 earned $266,000,000 after all possible deductions, including those for excess profits and income taxes," the statement continued. "This was nearly double their entire capital stock before the war. The profits for the war years average $58,000,000 a year, or nearly three times the pre-war average. But the packers' figures involve many unwarranted deductions, and, as the Federal Trade Commission recently pointed out, their wartime profits were at least three and one-half times as large as for the pre-war period, and the total profits for the 1912-18 period should appear as at least $320,000,000."

Mr. Lauck characterized as "misleading" the widely published advertisements and propaganda of the packers conveying the impression that their profits amounted to less than two cents on each dollar of sales, equivalent to a return of 26½ per cent. on net worth of capital stock and surplus combined.

"No business man," he declared, "except for publicity purposes, ever thinks of profit but in terms of rate of return on investment. Twenty-six per cent. is extortionate profiteering, however reasonable may appear the packers' cleverly contrived statements as to return per dollar of sales. There are enormous profits, running into many millions, from subsidiary companies, such as stock yard and by-product plants, held by dummy stockholders. These profits go directly to the principal stockholders of the Big Five and should be taken into consideration when estimating the portion of the consumer's dollar that goes into the coffers of the meat monopolists.

"The consumer also must remember that the profits of the packers appear small by reason of their practice of employing their profits to extend their control over food products other than meat.

"To wreck competitors costs money. And who but the consumer is paying the wrecking bill for the packers? The American family is paying for the privilege of its own ultimate subjection to a 100 per cent. food monopoly."

Mr. Lauck directed attention to what he called the wartime abuses of the packers with respect to cost plus contracts.

"Costs were wantonly inflated," he said, "in order that a low per cent. on costs might give a large profit in dollars. The packers have been actually guilty of pushing up costs to serve their own ends. Again, America, the chief cattle producing country of the world, sets the price for the world market. So, the cost of livestock in America is deliberately increased because a high world market means enormous profits for the packers in their South American and Australasian business. The American consumer must bear the burden of high prices so that the packers may continue to reap fabulous profits in their foreign undertakings."

Mr. Lauck's survey declared that the cattle men of America derived little benefit from these increased prices. The policy of the Big Five, he said, was to discourage cattle men to such an extent as to cause America's meat supply to lag far behind the country's needs. The livestock producers' profits are cut down by the packers' control of cattle-loan banks, stock cars, feeding stations and particularly by outrageous practices with respect to treatment of livestock on arrival at te yards."

Mr. Lauck absolved labor in the packing industry from responsibility in any material degree for the increase in the price of meat and meat products.

"Even an increase of 1,000 per cent. in wages would not have accounted for the increase in the price of meat to the consumer," he declared. "The increase in the packers' price of beef between 1914 and 1918 amounted to over eight times the entire labor cost in 1918, including both packing house and branch house labor."

Citing figures based on Mr. Swift's testimony before the Senate Investigating Committee, Mr. Lauck said he would show conclusively that labor received only 5 per cent. of the total cost of meat, or 69 cents out of $17.17 which the packers received for 100 pounds of beef in the principal cities of the country in 1918. The labor cost, he said, is only one-twenty-fifth of the price received by the packers, or less than the companies are showing as profit per pound of meat.

Head of Swift & Co. Replies.

L. F. Swift, President of Swift & Co., when asked if he had any comment on the statement issued by Mr. Lauck, said today:

"Swift & Co. has no part in the present controversy in which Mr. Lauck is engaged. However, his statement unfortunately recites certain inaccuracies from the Federal Trade Commission report which we feel called upon to correct. A rate of 2 per cent. on sales does not yield 26½ per cent. on net worth, as claimed by Mr. Lauck. It has yielded Swift & Co. only about 11 per cent. on capital employed.

"This is not profiteering. It must be remembered that wages, profits, supplies, freight, taxes, interest and all other expenses amount to only 15 per cent. of our sales and that we pay out about 85 per cent. for our raw material. If a family spent $300 a year, which is above the average, for the larger packers' products, less than seven cents a week would be the net profit on the basis of Swift & Co.'s 1919 earnings.

"Mr. Lauck says that we control canned goods and other grocery products. He has ignored the fact that the large packers, in competition with each other, handled only 3 or 4 per cent. of the groceries of the country, and even this small percentage has now been taken away by court decree. We control the price of no commodities. Swift & Co. is in open competition with every other packer, and we handle less than 15 per cent. even of the meat supply of the nation.

"The charges that we spent the profit to wreck competitors and that we padded our expenses under cost plus contracts during the war are untrue. The United States Food Administration reported that while they were under its supervision the profit of the five large packers on meat food products was only 1.75 per cent. on each dollar of sales, and only 5.6 per cent. on the capital employed. It is unfortunate that Mr. Lauck relied on the old reports of the Federal Trade Commission, which previously have been disproved in detail."

APPEAL TO LESSEN MAIL CONGESTION

Systematization of mailing in business offices so mail will be distributed throughout the day instead of being accumulated until its close, as is now the practice, is being urged by the Merchants Association, to relieve the daily congestion of business mail between 5 and 9:30 P. M. The average number of first class letters received between those hours is 4,000,000, and the accumulation is often the cause of cumulative delays, it is said.

"It is frequently impossible," says a statement by the Merchants Association, "to 'work' all the great accumulation of evening mail within the limited time available before the departure of the most expeditious mail trains. Consequently a considerable part of the outgoing evening mail is sometimes held up. It misses the fast through trains with close and fast connections for distant points. It moves by later and often slower trains, which make poor connections, resulting in cumulative delays.

"A regular mailing schedule should be prepared and posted in every office. So far as possible, correspondence should be advanced with reference to that schedule. Mailing clerks should be required to 'strip' the outgoing mail trays at regular and specified hours, and at once inclose and mail all letters, instead of waiting until late in the afternoon for a general clean-up."

Noon—To connect with the heavy fast mail trains leaving New York between 2 and 2:45 P. M., and to insure delivery of local mail the same afternoon.
2 P. M.—To connect with trains about 4 P. M.
4 P. M.—To connect with trains up to 6:30 P. M.
5:30 P. M.—To connect with principal Western trains.

Mail deposited in chutes and letter boxes should be advanced at least one hour before the hours indicated, because of the time consumed in collection.

"Do not mail circulars or parcels at night," the statement goes on. "In nine cases out of ten they will not move until the next day, in any event, and in the meantime they cause congestion and prevent prompt movement of letter mail.

"Early and regular mailing requires only a very simple and easy reform in office practice. It will greatly improve the mail service. Every business man should adopt and enforce it as a matter of self-interest."

Better pay for postal employes is urged by the Merchants Association, in a resolution sent to Congress, as a necessary step for the restoration and maintenance of efficient postal service.

GERARD SAYS WILSON CAN GIVE ARMENIA AID

Declares He Can Extend U. S. Protection, Without Mandate, as in Liberia's Case.

The possibility of according American aid to Armenia by some form of action by the President, although his recommendation to the Congress to vest him with authority to accept a mandate was rejected by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, was suggested by ex-Ambassador James W. Gerard in an address yesterday afternoon at a mass meeting in Carnegie Hall to celebrate the second anniversary of Armenian Independence Day.

Dr. Garo Pastermajian, Armenian Minister at Washington, said Armenia is not asking for help of American soldiers, but wanted arms and munitions and money to back the man power of the new country in maintaining her new independence.

Mr. Gerard said: "Armenia is asking of America principally moral and economic aid. Armenia wants to borrow in this country $50,000,000 to $100,000,000 with which to purchase farming implements, railway equipment and to organize her monetary system. She is also asking America to lend her munitions and supplies for the equipment of an Armenian army.

"While Congress is debating the form of the mandate we hope the President will exercise his executive power to aid Armenia. The Senate already has adopted a resolution which expressly or by implication gives the President certain rights. The President can take Armenia under America's protection, as we did Liberia. The President can detail a number of officers as advisers to the Armenian Government, as we did in 1912 to Chile. And the President must protect Americans in Armenia.

"There are two leading reasons which impose upon us the duty of aiding Armenia," continued Mr. Gerard. "I am speaking with full knowledge of the case when I say that had it not been for the fighting men of Armenia the Turks would have defeated Russia in the Caucasus and forced her to bring divisions from the German and Austrian fronts, which would have enabled the Germans to reach Nice.

"Without an independent Armenia the Turks will carry through their Turanian campaign to its logical conclusion. Then Europe and America will be drawn into a war which must determine the question as to whether the cross or the crescent will hold sway over the world."

BANK'S MILLIONS MOVED.

Citizens National Transfers Its Valuables to the Chemical National.

Many millions of dollars in cash, bonds and securities were moved yesterday from the vaults of the Citizens National Bank at 320 Broadway to the Chemical National Bank at 270 Broadway, completing the consolidation of the two institutions.

Policemen were placed on guard while bank employes carried bags containing millions in value from 320 to 270 Broadway, and a force of policemen was kept on duty at night, to guard the place during the work of distributing and locking up the gold, bills, securities and jewels and other personal property stored by individuals at the Citizens National. The total resources of the two banks which were consolidated are $230,000,000.

MERCHANTS DENY OPEN SHOP CRUSADE

HOPE TO END STRIKE SOON

Governor Smith May Address Longshoremen at Meeting to Vote on Going to Work.

No "open shop" campaign is planned by the city's commercial interests in their fight for the restoration of normal transportation facilities, Alfred W. Marling, Chairman of the Citizens' Transportation Committee, declared in a statement issued yesterday. Mr. Marling characterized as "wholly untrue" reports that a general labor upheaval was planned and that it was the intention of the committee to bring private police into the city.

Hope for an immediate settlement of the longshore strike, which is one of the chief factors in the transportation tieup, is seen by both the business men and the labor unionists from the conciliatory attitude which both sides have adopted. Governor Smith, who has started an inquiry on his own account, is expected to have a further conference today or tomorrow with T. V. O'Connor, President of the International Longshoremen's Association, and later in the week Mr. O'Connor will call a meeting of the longshoremen to take a vote on returning to work.

In his statement, Mr. Marling said:

"Assertions that the Citizens' Transportation Committee has not been endeavoring to adjust the differences which have arisen between the transportation companies and their employes and is engaged in a fight for the open shop are contrary to the facts and declarations of the committee.

"The principles and progress of the committee do not involve a campaign for the open shop. There is nothing in our principle which conflicts with the unionization of piers or trucks provided all citizens and all classes of merchandise are impartially served. If organized labor and union men are willing to perform that service they have nothing to fear from the activities of the committee.

"If the Transportation Trades Council, the Truckmen's Union and the Longshoremen's Union will abandon any effort to act contrary to these principles, the public will have secured a large measure of what the committee set out to accomplish.

"We warn the public to give no credence to the statement that it is our intention to import private guards or to try to bring about a general upheaval for the purpose of establishing the open shop. Such statements have no foundation in fact and are wholly untrue."

The charge that the merchants were planning to bring private guards into the city was made at a luncheon of the Merchants' Association by Peter J. Brady of the Allied Printing Trades. Mr. Brady quoted from the underwriting agreement for the independent trucking corporation which the merchants are planning. "Police protection" was one of the items for which, it was said, $500,000 was being raised.

It was reported that the longshoremen would be called together tomorrow on Wednesday, when Mr. O'Connor will report the result of his conferences with the Governor and the Citizens' Transportation Committee and will submit the proposal for the men to return to work. It was said that the Governor might attend the meeting and personally urge upon the men the importance of going back to their jobs.

VANDERLIP BACK FROM JAPAN

SAN FRANCISCO, May 30.—Frank A. Vanderlip, President of the International Banking Corporation, and a party of financial and other leaders arrived today on the liner Kore Maru from Japan, where they went to discuss international matters with Japanese leaders.

There was a strong desire for the friendship of this country in Japan, Mr. Vanderlip said. The party was entertained by several high Government officials, and as an instance of Japanese interest in the United States Mr. Vanderlip told of a meeting where more than 7,000 persons heard him deliver an address and from which so many were turned away that he was forced to address an overflow meeting.

NEW ROMANCE AT SEA HALTS WEDDING HERE

Ex-Doughboy's French Fiance, on Voyage to Join Him, Meets a Tenor.

When Mlle. Emilienne Romeuf, an attractive Parisienne of 22, boarded the Savoie at Havre, nine days ago, she thought she was in love with Ray Hewlett, former Sergeant in the 314th Field Signal Battalion of the 89th Division. And Hewlett thought she was, too, when he left his business in Findlay, Ohio, to come East to marry her just as soon after the steamer docked as possible. But—

Among the 780 passengers on the Savoie was Nicola Raspa, a tenor, who was returning from Rome, where he had studied for six months, to go upon the concert stage. Whether he met Mlle. Romeuf the first day out is not known, but as the voyage progressed fellow-passengers noticed that the two were inseperable companions. At night the voice of a tenor was frequently heard singing on one of the upper decks, and the passengers are in accord as to who inspired the lyrics.

Raspa and Mademoiselle came off the steamer hand in hand, and the tenor triumphantly announced that she was to be his bride. Outside the Customs inclosure stood Hewlett perplexed, but wafting kisses toward his supposed fiancee. And then some kindly disposed passenger broke the news to him. He refused to believe it and maintained that she still loved him and would carry out her promise to become his bride.

Meanwhile Mlle. Romeuf withheld declaration of her choice, leaving both the tenor and the ex-doughboy to await her decision. She was turned over to representatives of the Travelers' Aid Society, who promised to help her to reach a determination.

Carlsbad is in the hands of the Reds, whose control of Governmental affairs and business is absolute, according to H. P. Chamberlain, a Standard Oil official, who came on the Savoie. Mr. Chamberlain, who was a brother-in-law of the late John D. Archbold, said that the Bolsheviki had decreed that business was to be conducted only from 8 to 12 and from 2 to 6 daily. He said that the Reds had no sympathy for the middle or upper classes and made living hard for them. By the liberal use of money for tips he was able to get along comfortably.

Edward S. Witkowski of 1,105 Finley Avenue, the Bronx, who returned from a trip to Poland, said the Jews were receiving better treatment there than in many other countries. Their rights, he said, were preserved under the new Government and there was no noticeable feeling against them. Poland, he declared, in fighting alone against the Bolsheviki, was fighting the battles of the world.

OPPOSES SKIMPING CITY'S INSTITUTIONS

Wants More Liberal Appropriations for Street Cleaning and Probation Officers.

More adequate appropriations for the Department of Education, street cleaning, the care of mental defectives,, probation officers in courts, museums, the zoological and botonical parks and the New York Public Library, in the city's 1921 budget, are urged in a bulletin of the Women's Municipal League, made public yesterday.

"We have borne in mind the possibly high tax rate, and are urging no indulgence in luxuries and nonessentials," the bulletin states. "The proper upkeep of the city's established institutions, facilities for the effective care of its wards, apparatus which will really clean our streets, these are necessities which the richest city in the world can not refuse to its citizens.

"If economies are to be practiced, let them be along the lines of the general reorganization of city departments. Various civic bodies in recent years have demonstrated how this might be done."

The bulletin states that appropriations for the new Public Library in recent years have been so meagre as to permit no expansion and to limit its service. Librarians are stated to be leaving for more remunerative work. Hope is expressed that the Board of Estimate will make a more generous allowance than the appropriation of $993,585 for 1920. In regard to the museums and zoological and botanical parks, the management of some of which has recently been criticised by the Commissioner of Accounts, the bulletin says:

"These institutions, which minister alike to our educational advancement and our pleasures, have fared ill in the budgets of the last few years. Their further neglect means, in some cases, the waste of the large sums originally invested, and in all cases the limitation of usefulness to the point where ends can be made to meet. Replenishments are needed to correct the too short-sighted economies of the recent past and maintenance funds sufficient to allow some measure of growth and expansion."

The league urges the employment of more probation officers in the courts, and asks an appropriation for the equipment of the new buildings on Randall's Island, erected for the care of the city's mentally defective, but permitted to stand vacant while the patients remain in antiquated and unsanitary buildings. Appropriations for the purchase of improved street cleaning apparatus and the construction of modern disposal plants are also urged.

Expressing pleasure that the passage of the Lockwood-Donohue bill has assured increased salaries for teachers, the league asks increased appropriations for special classes, evening schools, the music department, visiting teachers and the director of extension activities.

B.R.T. DESPITE STRIKE HAS RECORD CROWDS

STRIKERS TALK CONFIDENTLY

Call Company's Success Only Temporary and Say Real Test Will Come Later.

The Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company carried the largest crowd of the year over its lines yesterday, in spite of the strike of the members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Enlarged trains were put on the elevated and subway lines to meet the rush for Coney Island to take advantage of the fine weather, and the service did not appear to be at all impeded by the strike. The success of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit lines was earned in the face of predictions of the strike leaders that the service would begin to break down on Saturday and would collapse on Sunday. Officials of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company regarded the showing as proof that the strike was a complete failure, and expressed confidence that the service would continue to be normal, even if the strike did not end at once.

The strikers did not meet yesterday at their headquarters, at Tammany Hall in Brooklyn, and none of the strike leaders appeared there. Individual strikers, however, insisted that they were not worried by the company's success in operating the lines without them and that the real test of the strike would come later. According to strikers, the shortage of electricians, under which the company is working, can only be met for a short time by the expedient of working loyal employes double time and putting supervisory officials and engineers to work in the power houses and substations. Some strikers were hopeful that they would be joined by electricians employed by other public utilities, but no move in this direction was made yesterday. According to company officials, considerably less than a hundred men quit work and a few of these have returned.

The strikers are picketing the power-houses and substations, but have had no success, it was asserted, in getting men who remained loyal on Friday to quit their jobs. Extra police protection has been furnished at all points affected by the strike, but no disorder has been reported.

The strikers have no meeting scheduled until Tuesday. By that time their ability to disturb the service of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit lines will have had a thorough test, and officials of the company believe that the electricians will not attempt to continue their strike after that date. Talk of a strike by the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electrical Railway Employes has stopped since the leaders called upon their members to stand by their agreement with the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, which expires Aug. 1.

AVERT DETROIT CAR STRIKE.

Railway Workers' Demands for Higher Wages Are Met.

DETROIT, May 30.—The strike of Detroit street railway employes, threatened for June 1, was averted when the Detroit United Railway announced today that the wage demands of the Street Car Men's Union would be met.

The action of the company, which grants a wage scale of 70, 73 and 75 cents an hour, will also result in discontinuance of the free transfer system in the one-fare zone, it was announced. Officials of the company stated that curtailment of transfer privileges would be necessary, because of the city's refusal to grant permission for an increase in fares from 5 to 6 cents. The company had previously announced that its revenues would not warrant meeting the wage demands of its employes, and informed the men that it would be impossible to treat with them until the City Council authorized increase fare rates.

Woman Escapes Death In Subway.

Mrs. Nora Suttle, 40 years old, of 441 Tompkins Avenue, Brooklyn, escaped death by a few feet yesterday afternoon when she fell from the subway platform at Lexington Avenue and Eighty-sixth Street, in front of an express train. The motorman stopped the train a few feet from her. The platform was not crowded, and how Mrs. Suttle came to fall in front of the train was not discovered. She was attended for shock and taken to Flower Hospital.

GRUNAU FAILS IN PLAN TO START NEW STRIKE

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 30.—An attempt by John Grunau, President of the Chicago Yardmen's Association, and Harold Reading, leader of the United Enginemen's Association, to stage another outlaw railroad strike in Chicago failed today.

The strike, it is said, was to be in the nature of a demonstration with a view to forcing the new Railway Labor Board to recognize and treat with the outlaw unions. This board, it is reported, will hand down a decision on the railway wage case some time in the coming week, and Grunau and Reading hoped by the new demonstration, it is said, to gain credit for any new increases granted, as well as to install their organizations in and oust the railway brotherhoods from a controlling position.

But the only roads affected thus far by the threatened walkout of firemen and engineers are the Chicago Junction, the Chicago & Alton and the Soo Line. Less than 350 are said to have quit work.

Reading prophesied yesterday that by tonight 35,000 railroad workers would have joined the strike.

Reds Report Trade Bids from Here.

LONDON, May 30.—A wireless dispatch from Moscow says that sixty-six New York firms and several firms from other cities in the United States have asked the Russian Soviet Government immediately to resume trade relations with them.

JAPAN SEEKS RENEWAL OF BRITISH ALLIANCE

Points to Bolshevist Menace to India As Reason Why Britain Should Agree.

TOKIO, May 28 (Associated Press).—Baron Gonsuke Hayashi, the new Japanese Ambassador to Great Britain, will take up negotiations for a renewal of the Anglo-Japanese alliance as soon as he reaches London, according to the Asahi today.

Articles by Japanese publicists in support of the renewal of the alliances are being published daily. They think that modifications will have to be made in the agreement, but they call particular attention to the Bolshevist menace to India as a powerful reason why the British should desire a renewal of the alliances.

BOMB DAMAGES HOME OF FACTORY OFFICIAL

WATERBURY, Conn., May 30.—A bomb exploded just before midnight tonight in front of the home of John H. Goss, Secretary and Treasurer of the E. Scovill Manufacturing Company of this city.

The front veranda of the house was damaged and several windows were shattered, but as far as could be learned no one was injured.

Rainy Day Funds!

Have you securely protected yours?

PROBABLY you are "saving up" for a Rainy Day that may come in your own lifetime. But your heirs may have "Rainy Days" too. Have you made sure of the safety after your death of the funds you are planning to leave your family?

Most men think they have, but court and insurance records often prove the contrary. For example:

1. A pioneer business man of Pittsburg left a business valued at $1,000,000. Through mismanagement the business was lost; the sale of his magnificent home forced—all within a few years of his death.

2. A wealthy manufacturer of Indiana left $500,000 each to his widow and two sons. Through lack of financial experience the widow and one son lost all their property within eight years. That of the other son was involved.

3. A citizen of Pennsylvania died some years ago leaving over $400,000 in life insurance and a highly profitable business. Unfortunate investments by heirs followed. In less than nine years the money was either lost outright or yielded but meagre returns. Today the business is practically valueless.

In each of the above instances ability and good judgment enabled men to make money. But these men lacked foresight—the foresight to provide for the experienced handling of the money they left. With this in mind, we would be glad to discuss with you—for safeguarding the money you leave

The plan is this:

1. A Columbia Trust Fund is simply money set aside under the protection of the Columbia Trust Company and invested with the judgment of trained experts to provide periodical income for definite objects.
2. Life insurance or any other money may be used to form the Trust Fund. We are bound by a written agreement to carry out your wishes definitely and absolutely.
3. We will make investments of the Trust Fund for you in such securities as are lawful for Trustees, or, if you prefer, you can give us definite instructions to follow.
4. Income from the Trust Fund will be paid in installments to whom you wish and when you wish and in the amount you wish.

You can take up this matter at any one of our offices. The Vice-President or Manager in charge will be glad to talk to you personally and promptly. Of course there is no obligation on your part.
